BLESSINGS

God Śiva revealed four vedas—Rk, Yajuh, Sāma, Atharva and twenty eight Āgamas by his five faces namely Sadyojāta, Vāmadeva, Aghora, Tatpuruṣa and Īśāna respectively for the welfare of mankind. There are twenty eight Śaivāgamas right from the Kāmika to Vātula, each divided into four parts viz. jñānapāda, kriyāpāda, yogapāda and caryāpāda. These aforesaid Nigamāgamas are the main sources of the religious philosophy of the 'Sanātana dharma'. The ardent followers of this eternal religion attain the summumbonum of life, by adhering to the paths directed by the Āgamas and Nigamas.

Since Nigama and Āgama are emanated from the God Śiva, can never be contradictory. Sri Nīlakaṇṭha Śivācārya, in the first verse of his book Kriyāsāra supports the view —

परस्पराविरुद्धार्थाः शिवोक्ता निगमागमाः ।
अल्पबुद्धिभिरन्योन्यं विरोधः परिकल्प्यते ॥

The religious rites and duties of the Śaivas and Vīraśaivas propounded in the former part and the later part of the twenty eight Śaivāgamas respectively have been indicated in the following verse of the Siddhānta Śikhāmaṇi —

सिद्धान्ताख्ये महातन्त्रे कामिकाद्ये शिवोदिते ।
निर्दिष्टमुत्तरे भागे वीरशैवमतं परम् ॥

Five great teachers namely Sri Reṇuka, Sri Dāruka, Sri Ghaṇṭakarna, Sri Dhenukarna and Sri Viśvakarna have established the doctrine of the Vīraśaiva philosophy which is propounded by the God Śiva Himself in the later portion of Śaivāgamas. The aforesaid sages preached this revelation to the eminent ṛṣis as per the will of the Lord Śiva. Those teachings are compiled in the scriptures like Siddhānta Śikhāmaṇi etc. Thus, the utterances of Śiva as the Vīraśaiva philosophy have been instituted in the world by the five great saints. Therefore, these five illustrious preachers are regarded as the founders of the religion of Vīraśaivism.

It is a matter of regret that the age old scriptures of Śaivāgamas have become rare now-a-days. With a view to rediscovering and publishing the obscured Śaivāgamas, a research Institute namely 'Śaiva Bharati Shodha Pratishthanam' was founded in 1993 in the famous 'Sri Jangamawadimath', Varanasi. Four Āgamas viz. Candrajñānāgama, Sūkṣmāgama, Makuṭāgama and Kāraṇāgama, with their Hindi translations have already been published from the Research Institute on the occasion of the Mahāśivarātri in 1994.

The Pārameśvarāgama (with Hindi translation) edited by Pt. Vrajavallabha Dwivedi, the Director of the Institute and the Candrajñānāgama rendered into English by Dr. Rama Ghose along with some other books on Śaivism by the learned scholars were published by the Research Institute in 1995.

I feel immense pleasure in dedicating to the learned scholars the Makuṭāgama and Sūkṣmāgama (with English translations), Īśā and Kena Upaniṣads (with Hindi translations of Vīraśaiva commentary), Śakti Viśiṣṭādvaita Tattvatraya Vimarśa and Siddhānta Prakāśikā, in 1996.

To translate the ancient literature of Śaivāgamas into the international language like English along with the Indian languages is one of the aims of our Institute. This will also facilitate the study and practice of Āgamic principles for the Western scholars. With a view to fulfil this aim Dr. Rama Ghose, Reader, Deptt. of Philosophy, Arya Mahila Mahavidyalaya, Varanasi, has made a laudable effort in rendering a faithful English translation of Candrajñānāgama and Makuṭāgama in a lucid language. Dr. Rama Ghose possesses an immense regard for and a deep inclination to the Śaivasiddhānta as well as the Vīraśaivism. She is a sincere scholar and has made a deep study of Siddhānta Śikhāmaṇi and Anubhava Sūtra for the last six years and aspires to write commentaries on those scriptures.

The Aṣṭāvaraṇa and Pañcācāra advocated in the Vīraśaiva philosophy have been aptly propounded in the kriyāpāda and caryāpāda of Candrajñānāgama. Adherence to these disciplines is essential for all the devotees of Vīraśaiva religion. Guru, Liṅga, Jaṅgama, Pādodaka, Prasāda, Vibhūti, Rudrākṣa and Mantra are eightfold protectors from the six types of enemies such as lust, anger etc. That is the reason why they are named as sheaths (āvaraṇas). Five 'Ācāras' such as Liṅgācāra, Sadācāra, Śivācāra, Gaṇācāra and Bhrityācāra are the means for the external and internal purification of the Sādhaka. Thus, purified, the devotee attains the state of Liṅgāṅga-Sāmarasya after ascending the stages of the Ṣaṭasthalas.

आचारहीनः पुरुषो लोके भवति निन्दितः ॥

Therefore, according to Siddhānta Śikhāmaṇi, one who does not practice these fivefold 'Ācāras' can never be venerated by the people even if he attains great scholarships. Because of this reason Pañcācāra has been accorded the utmost importance in Vīraśaiva religion. It has been dealt with in detail in Candrajñānāgama. This scripture can play a very important role in establishing peace and tranquility in the world after eliminating the opposite forces aroused as a consequence of the non-prevalence of the Pañcācāras.

Vīraśaivāgamas believe in the integration of knowledge and action (ज्ञान-कर्म-समुच्चयवाद) as the means for the attainment of liberation. I have already described this subject in detail in my book namely ‘Siddhānta Śikhāmaṇi Samīkṣā’. In the Kriyāpāda of Makuṭāgama, Śāmbhavavrata, also named as ‘Śirovrata’ has been enunciated as the supreme means to liberation. Here, the regular duties of the observer of Śāmbhavavrata, three kinds of worships along with the process of drawing the maṇḍalas have been narrated in detail. Performance of worship on the maṇḍalas drawn as per the prescribed procedure, is rarely observed now-a-days. Almost all the Śaivāgamas, as well as Vaiṣṇava and Bauddha Tantras have fully described the procedures and significance of the various maṇḍalas and their ritualistic application in the worships. The special features of the ‘Pañcasūtra’ liṅga, the rites of Sannidhānam, Avagunṭhanam, Sakalīkaraṇa, Amṛtikaraṇa etc. have also been narrated as the inevitable processes of worship. The glory of ‘Prasād’, one of the eight protective aura i.e. Aṣṭāvaraṇa, has been advocated in the present scripture.

Therefore, I have no doubt in my mind that this translation rendered by Dr. Rama Ghose will be very useful for the study of this Āgama both by the Oriental and Western scholars.

I wish her to achieve success and recognition in the field of religious literature for which she is making a sincere and constant effort. Dr. G. C. Kendadamath of the Central Library of the Banaras Hindu University, Varanasi, has constantly extended his sincere co-operation by way of valuable suggestions along with the reading of the proof to accomplish the book in a nice way. Shri Chidananda O. Hiremath (Kasgi) and Rajashekhar G. Hiremath have very carefully composed the manuscript in the computer and the Proprietor and the staff of the Shiva-Shakti Computer Process have always been helpful in printing the book in a short period of time. May Jagadguru Vishwaradhya, Lord Vishwanath and Goddess Annapurna protect them and bestow all affluences.

INTRODUCTION

Indian culture is an amalgamation of both the vedic and non-vedic traditions. Aryan civilization has merged within itself many an element of the alien cultures. Not only that various trends of almost all the great traditions of the world have mingled with and constituted an integral part of the culture of India. A thorough study of the special features of the cultural and spiritual life of India, compels one to recognise the vast Purānic and Tāntrik literatures also along with the vedic and non-vedic traditions.

A subtle and deep perspective of the Indian philosophy will reveal the truth that the unconscious elements are neither different from nor opposed to the consciousness, rather are complementary and included in the all embracing experience of the Reality. Yoga and Tantra literatures also are in conformity with the above view. Tantra is much more wider in its spiritual disciplines and approach than yoga which advocates the internal spiritual path in accordance with the outer or the general characteristics of the human personality. So, the word 'śruti' denotes both Veda and Tantra, the two expressions of the means, to one and the same spiritual end. To understand the true significance of Tāntric discipline, we have to follow the various revelations of the Āgamic, often called as Tāntric scriptures.

In Mṛgendra Tantra, various divisions of Tāntric literatures have duly been illustrated. The question arises as to how Parama Śiva, the embodiment of pure consciousness manifests and transmits the undivided transcendental knowledge to the experiential level. It is stated by way of reply that the supreme God revealed the pure knowledge through His famous five faces i.e. upper (Īśāna), eastern (Tatpuruṣa), southern (Aghora), northern (Vāmadeva) and western (Sadyojāta). It has also been stated that various knowledges have emerged from the above mentioned faces, such as, all the Siddhāntāgamas are revealed by the upper face Īśāna, Gāruda Tantra by the eastern face namely Tatpuruṣa, Bhūta Tantra by the western face namely Sadyojāta, Vāma Tantra by the northern face Vāmadeva and Bhairavāgama by the southern face— Aghora. The pure indivisible knowledge of transcendental Śiva is primarily manifested as nāda, the first expression of the pure consciousness in the form of vibration (Spanda). That vibration of consciousness – force assumes the form of scriptural knowledge after descending to the sphere of Sadāśiva. According to Kāmikāgama, five sources namely Laukik (empirical), Vaidik (Scriptural), Ādhyātmika (spiritual), Atimārga (transcendental) and Mantrātmak (aphoristic, the world of hymns) have emanated from each of the five faces of Sadāśiva. Hence the total number of sources comes to twentyfive. It is to be noted here that the knowledge emanated from the upper mouth, named as 'Siddhāntāgama', is the bestower of the liberation. In accordance with the spheres of the preachers, the knowledge is considered to be of different status. Hence, it is stated in Svāyambhūvāgama that the knowledge revealed by Śiva, though basically of the same nature, assumes different forms in association with the other elements. As one and the same knowledge adopts different modes because of the differences of the preachers, so also, it acquires a specific form as per the status of the recipients of the knowledge. Parama Śiva, the highest Principle, manifested ten Śivas, initially revealed and distributed the undivided knowledge to them. Then the knowledge was imparted to the ṛṣis and divinities by the Śivas and Rudras.

There are ten Śaivāgamas manifested by ten Śivas and eighteen Rudrāgamas revealed by the eighteen Rudras. 28 Śaivāgamas that are bifercated into 66 in accordance with the number of recipients of the same i.e. 3 for Śaivāgamas ( $10 \times 3 = 30$ ) and 2 for Rudrāgamas ( $18 \times 2 = 36$ . Total 66), are known as the whole literature of Śaivāgamas.

Sanskrit lexicon 'Nighaṇṭu' names the veda as 'Nigama' and Tantra as the 'Āgama' and hence both have been regarded under a common caption as 'Śruti', as stated above. Āgama and Nigama are the vast, unfathomable treasures of the Indian Religion and Philosophy. Vedas are mostly of the nature of mantra and so in the form of aphorisms; Āgamas, on the other hand, are composed in verses. It is believed to be emanated from God and hence termed as 'Āgama'. The syllable 'Ā' denotes that which is originated, 'ga' signifies 'falling' i.e. falling to the Goddess Pārvatī and 'ma' means the religion or the doctrine for the devotee. It is the exposition of divine knowledge, the supreme Reality and the way to attain it through the means of prescribed procedures and meditation with the hymns. According to some Śaiva sects 'Āgama' illustrates the knowledge (ā), the liberation (ga) and the means to destroy the bonds (ma). It has been emphasised that the adherers of Āgama aim at the ultimate Reality as pure consciousness and bliss, enhance the power of the body and mind for apprehending Reality in and through their own being. It is to be noted here that in Āgama and Tantra, emphasis has been laid down on the fact that the human body (aṇḍa) consists of the potentiality of the divinity and the supreme power inherent in the whole creation (piṇḍa). Macrocosm is implied in Microcosm. That implicit Power can be awakened by being immersed in the unflinching deep meditation on the particular points in the body (cakra) which are regarded to be the base of the power. Mantras are the potent fire that kindle the consciousness-power within, religious rites and duties are the helping processes that prepare the ground and the congenial state to get the ultimate power manifested within.

In the history of the Tāntric literature, ten Śaivāgamas and eighteen Rudrāgamas have been recognised. Though some of the above Āgamas sometime indicate the dualistic stand, where as others advocate non-dualism, but the authenticity of all the Āgamas is considered to be unquestionable. Pauṣkar Āgama maintains that all the twenty eight Āgamas, may it be dualistic or non-dualistic, are known as the Siddhānta-Āgama. It is indeed a matter of regret that only a small part of this vast religious scripture is available, major portion has already been lost in oblivion. This has been stated in Kiraṇāgama and Śrikanthi-Saṁhitā that though the knowledge by itself is undivided and indivisible but Parama Śiva, the omniscient ultimate Reality, out of compassion for the welfare of the world, manifested this eternal knowledge primarily to the ten Śivas and eighteen Rudras for the purpose of revealing it to the empirical world through the divinities and the ṛṣis. It is pertinent to note here that Vedas also represent indivisible eternal knowledge which is revealed to the ṛṣis in a state of spiritual trance of deep meditation.

Parama Śiva revealed the first Āgama to Śiva named as Praṇava.<sup>1</sup> It is said that the number of verses in this Kāmika Āgama are more than a billion. A ṛṣi named Hara received this Āgama from Trikāl who received It from Praṇava.

1. Tantra o āgamaśāstrer digdarśan (Bengali Ed.), Gopinath Kaviraj, p. 51.

The name of the second Āgama is yogaja, containing one lac verses and divided in five parts, originally revealed to Sudhā (Śiva) and then passed on to Bhasma and Prabhu respectively.

The third Āgama named Cintya, containing one lac verses and divided in six parts was originally revealed to Dīpta and delivered to Gopati and then to Ambikā.

The fourth Āgama known as Kāraṇa, containing one crore verses and divided in seven parts was initially revealed to Kāraṇa and given to Śarva and by him to Prajāpati.

The fifth Āgama namely Ajit consisting of one lac verses, divided in four parts was manifested first to Suśiva and then by him preached to Umeśa who again taught the same to Acyut.

The sixth Āgama called Sudīptak containing one lac verses, divided in nine parts originally revealed to Īśa who gave it to Trimūrti who again transmits it to Hutāsana.

The seventh Āgama named Sūkṣma having billions of verses, and having no parts, was initially revealed to Sūkṣma and from him to Bhava and then from Bhava to Prabhanjana.

The eighth Āgama known as Sahasra, divided in ten parts, was primarily revealed to Kāla and then passed on to Bhīma and Dharma respectively.

The ninth Āgama is Suprabheda, consisting of three crore verses, was first revealed to Daśeśa and then passed on to Vigraheśa and Śaśi respectively.

The tenth and the last Śaivāgama, namely Aṅśumāna, divided in twelve parts, was revealed to Aṅśu, then preached to ugra and Ravi respectively.

It is to be noted here that in Śrikanthī Samhitā, Makuṭāgama has been mentioned in place of Suprabheda.

Now, the Rudrāgamas, numbering eighteen, originally revealed to the Rudras who preached the sacred knowledge to the ṛṣis and the divinities are respectively described hereunder as per the enumeration made in Kiraṇāgama<sup>1</sup> —

It is noted in the commentary of Tantrāloka by Jayarath that in Śrīkanthī Saṁhitā, Makuṭa and Dīpta have been replaced in place of Kāraṇa and Sudīpta. Śrīkanthī maintains that the ten Śaivāgamas possess the dualistic trend where as eighteen Rudrāgamas mainly preach the view of non-dualism. There are other differences in Śrīkanthī Saṁhitā such as the Candrāṅśu in place of Candrahāsa, Vīrabhadra in place of Bhadra, Raurava in place of Kauravya and Vimala in place of Makuṭa have been mentioned. In other places, the name Candrajñāna is mentioned in place of Mukhbimba. Ofcourse there are some other differences of names of Rudrāgamas in Nihśvās Tantra Saṁhitā, Brahmayāmal Tantra and Kāmikāgama etc. A detailed discussion has here been avoided in order to refrain from the unnecessary elaboration.

The present scripture, consisting of Kriyāpāda and Caryāpāda, is the later portion of the scripture Makuṭāgama—one of the eighteen Rudrāgamas among the twenty eight Siddhāntāgamas including the other ten Śaivāgamas. The Kriyāpāda of this scripture is contained in five chapters where as Caryāpāda consists of ten. The presentation adopts the form of discourse between Parama Śiva and Rudra. It has been maintained by all the ācāryās that Nigama and Āgama are the spontaneous expression like the inhalation and exhalation of the Lord Śiva, the resident of the mount Kailāśa. God Rudra, after bowing unto Him, humbly enquires about the eminent means of liberation named as Śāmbhavavrata manifested by the supreme Lord, compiled under the caption as 'Makuṭāgama'—the crown of all Āgamas. It advocates the supremacy of Śāmbhavavrata, the procedures of regular worships to be observed by the devotees of Śiva, specific kinds of worship and various items to be offered through them and a detailed description of the different procedures of the last rite to be performed on the demise of the observer of the Śāmbhavavrata.

Then Parama Śiva gradually illustrates in the first chapter of Kriyāpāda that one who aspires for emancipation from the turbulent ocean of the world, should observe Śāmbhavavrata, also named as 'Śirovrata', the supreme discipline, advocated in the later portion of veda and Āgama. The excellence of Śāmbhavavrata has unequivocally been stated here.

By the grace of God, Sādhaka, on obtaining the three kinds of dīkṣās (vedha, manu and kriyā) from guru, getting rid of the three impurities (māyā, kārma and āṇava), achieving the conditions of malaparipāka and karma-sāmya, becomes free from the cycle of birth and death and consequently attains the state of liberation. Śāmbhavavrata has emphatically been stated here as the only sure means to the end i.e. liberation. It is undeniably asserted that the person, who does not observe Śāmbhavavrata, even having been involved in karmayoga, is regarded as nothing but an animal and is sure to suffer a lot. Thus, after advocating the glory of Śāmbhavavrata, Parama Śiva, on the inquiry of Rudra, proceeds on describing, in the second chapter, the regular features of the principles of worship. Śāmbhavavrata is the supreme of all worships that terminates the bonds of the world and elevates one to the goal of life, the eternal state of bliss. Wise persons are advised to get-up from the bed in the early morning, get purified by washing, ease themselves observing the rules laid down before sitting for the worship and dedicating three oblations in the name of ātmavidyā, Śiva-tattva by enchanting the hymn 'ātma tattvāya svāhā', vidyā tattvāya svāhā' and Śiva tattvāya svāhā'. He should invoke the Śiva pilgrim in the water and take the bath before performing Tarpaṇa and Aghamarṣaṇa in the name of gods and ancestors. Devotee should maintain all kinds of cleanliness and purity, as any deviation from purity would condemn to darkness of ignorance and consequently deprive him of the light of knowledge. Sacred ashes prepared in the Śivāgni should be besmeared by the process of Uddhūlan throughout the whole body. Not only that, Tripunḍraka are to be drawn after besmearing the sacred ashes in thirty two places, such as wrists, elbows, heart, two chests, navel, two anus, two thais, two hips, two knees, two muscles of the legs and two feet. Rudrākṣa should be worn by taking vow. Definite numbers of Rudrākṣas are prescribed for the various parts of the body — one in the crest, thirty on the head, thirty six on the neck, sixteen on each arm, twelve on the wrist, five hundred on the shoulder etc. A garland of 108 Rudrākṣas is to be prepared for the purpose of 'japa-yajña'. Rudrākṣa is to be worn on the head reciting Īśāna hymn, on the face uttering Tatpuruṣa hymn, on the neck and two hands enchanting the Aghora hymn and on the belly reciting the Vyomvyāpī hymn. All the Rudrākṣas and garlands may also be worn enchanting only the original hymn i.e. Pañcākṣara. Then fire is to be enkindled for the oblation aspiring for the fulfilment of the different purposes. There are seven names and places of the tongue of fire, viz. Suvarṇā, Kanakā, Raktā, Kṛṣṇā, Suprabhā, Atiraktā, Bahurūpā existing in the west, middle, north, south, east, south-east (Āgneya) and north east (Īśāna) respectively. The oblations are to be offered to the Suvarṇā tongue at the time of marriage, to the Kanakā tongue which exists in the middle, on the occasion of yajña (sacrifice), to the Raktā tongue during the time of sacred thread ceremony, to the Kṛṣṇā tongue, on the occasion of the last rites for the ancestors, to the Suprabhā tongue, for the fulfilment of the desired actions (kāmyakarma), to the Atiraktā tongue, to obtain peace and to the Bahurūpā tongue, for the purpose of accomplishing the strong actions. Śivāgni is to be meditated upon, conceiving as having five red-coloured faces, seven tongues, ten hands, three eyes, possessing ten personal weapons, decorated with all kinds of ornaments, wearing red clothes and seated in a lotus posture on a lotus flower.

Oblation, during morning and evening as per the procedure laid down should be offered to such Śivāgni for the attainment of both empirical and spiritual aspirations and take refuge of Guru and Jaṅgama. All the aforesaid processes of worships should be completed by one eighth part of the day. Second part of the day is to be spent in studying and discussing the scriptures like Āgama and Nigama etc, and performing japa. The third part of the day should be utilized to collect the articles and accessories of the worship and earn the means of livelihood for the dependants. In the evening, bath should be completed by collecting the earth and conceiving in it the pilgrimage of Śiva. Five mahā yajñas are to be observed, by the house holders, after having fulfilled the regular rites of worship during day and evening as per the rules laid down. Worship of devas, ṛsis and ancestors are included within the regular duties of the day. One should observe the worship either three or six times during the whole day in accordance with the instruction of the scriptures. The worship of the day is to be completed after having performed the process of Vaiśvadeva.

There are three kinds of worships namely Mahatī, Gurvī and Laghvī. Devotee should perform the worship of Iṣṭaliṅga received from guru, duly purified by the Pañcākṣara, with over whelming emotion and intense religious sentiments. The supreme worship should be performed on the Ṣaṣṭhalas. All the worships are to be completed after offering the food to the Māheśvaras.

Third chapter of Kriyāpāda depicts the aforesaid three kinds of worships i.e. Mahatī, Gurvī and Laghvī. Person belonging to the first order is eligible to perform Mahatī where as the persons who belong to the middle and third order should perform the Gurvī and Laghvī worships respectively. Tattva maṇḍal, Bhadra maṇḍal and Navapadma maṇḍal are to be drawn and there is the tradition of litting hundred and eight, three hundred or one thousand lamps in Gurvī and Mahatī worships, where as nine or twelve lamps should be kindled in Laghvī worship and thirty six or eighteen lamps are to be lit in Gurvī worship. It is to be noted here that only one, two or four lamps may be lighted in the Laghvī or Avasarā, Mahatī and Gurvī worships. One hundred eight times of original Pañcākṣara hymn should be recited during Laghvī and Avasarā worships where as one thousand times in Gurvī and Mahatī worships.

Three kinds of 'Āratī' namely Darśana, Avasarā and Uttarā have been assigned in Avasarā worship. Nine processes of Āratī namely Darśanākhyā, Avasarākhyā, Majjanākhyā, Māṅgalyākhyā, Karpūr, Śringār, Mahānīrājan, Ānandākhyā, and Asaṅkhyāta have been prescribed in Laghvī worship. By adding sānurāga and betel leaves, eleven kinds of Ārati have been laid down in Mahatī and Gurvī worships. No worship should be performed without lighting the lamp.

Various ingredients used in worships have been narrated in the fourth chapter of Kriyāpāda. A mixture of honey, cow-milk curd, ghee and sugar in equal proportion with the sacred water is the most appropriate liquid for the sacred bath of the deity. Cardamom, khus, clove, Kastūrī and vermilion colour powder may also be added along with the above mixture. A mixed ointment consisting of rocanā, kumkum, cardamom, camphor, kūṭa, black agar, kastūrī, sandle, inner stuff of bilva, kritamāl and the devadār fruit is very pleasant to God Śiva. Devotee should worship God with the precious flowers like Droṇa, Bakul, Punnāg, Mandār, Nandyavart, Śriyāvart, Karavīr, Ark, Śatapatra, Utpal, Lodhra, Dhatūrā, Pāṭal, Campak, Bilva leaves, Tamāl, Kath Campā, Mālafi, Mallikā, Nirguṇḍī, Vikarṇī, Bahuparṇī, Ajitā, Kalhār, Atasī, Kusumbha and Lotus. White flowers are considered to be possessed of sāttvik quality and so worshipping God with these flowers brings forth the liberation for the devotee. Red flowers containing the rājas quality are the bestower of the desired results. Flowers of yellow colour and having various mixed colours are known to be the conferrer of both the enjoyment and the liberation. Black flowers except the blue lotus should be abandoned in worshipping Śiva as those are said to be possessing the tāmas quality. Names of the particular flowers have duly been mentioned for the worship of different times, such as, morning, noon, evening and midnight. Flowers like yuthikā, Madayanti, Mādhavī, Śirīṣa, Bandhuk, Sarjak etc. should always be discarded. Leaves of bilva, Apāmārg, Campak, Kadamba, Damanak and Drona etc. are esteemed for the worship of Śiva. Then God proceeds to narrate the procedures of preparing the various dhūpas (incense powder). A mixture of ten ingredients, such as, Camphor, Agar, Takkol, Nutmeg, Clove, Jatāmāṁsī, Sinhī, Mustak, Sandle and ghee, is known as 'Daśāṅga dhūpa'. A mixture of Sandle, Agar, Camphor, Kastūrī, Kumkum, Takkol, Elā, Nāg flower, Clove and Cinnamon is named as 'Yakṣakardam dhūp'. The dhūp made of Sandle, Agar, Camphor, Clove, Cinnamon, Rhus succedenia, Cardamom, Jatāmāṁsī is famous as 'Prājāpatya' dhūp. Dhūpa prepared by the ingredients of Sandle, Agar, Camphor, Musk, Tilak, Clove, Hasitā and Mustā is known as the bestower of victory. Camphor, black Agar, Hyber, Saurasialapa and Sandle are to be mixed up gradually increasing the quantity and honey is to be added in the proportion of one, two, three, four, five and six times. The name of this dhūp is 'Śītāri' which is very dear to God. Sandle, Camphor, Agar, Rhus Succedenia and Sarjaras are to be added with the powder of Sausuria lapa (koṣṭha) and Cyperus Rotundus (Mustā). Then the whole thing is to be added with 'Vijayākhyā' dhūp and is named as the famous 'Karpūr kalyān' dhūp which is known to be the means of liberation. The dhūp named as Amṛta, prepared by the powder of Sandle, Agar, Musk, Cyperus Rotundus and Rhus Succedenia (Sinhak) is known to be the conferrer of immortality. 'Sugandhika' dhūp, prepared by Takkol, Pūg, Camphor, Nutmeg and Clove is the bestower of both the enjoyment and the liberation. It is also known as the conferrer of both the enjoyment and the wealth. Dhūp prepared by white Agar, also imparts the liberation. Dhūp, a mixture of Guggul and Ghee is the provider of immense enjoyment. Dhūp prepared by mixing the powder of Tamāl and Mahisākṣa is known to be the bestower of the status of Sāyujya to the devotee.

Then the procedures of enkindling the lamp have been narrated in detail. Ghee prepared by cow-milk is considered to be the best, from buffalo milk, of medium quality and the oil squeezed from the sesamum seeds is said to be of the lowest kind. The oil of the Margosa and Castor seed etc. that produce bad smell should always be discarded.

The special characteristics of liṅga have been narrated. Liṅga made of crystal etc, associated with Śakti, should be worshipped. Pañca-sūtra liṅga is the conferrer of all the desires and successes of life. The length, breadth and the vertical height of the base of liṅga (pīṭha) should be equal to the circumference of the liṅga and Gomukh (upper outlet) should be half of the size of the circumference of the liṅga. Liṅga possessing these five characteristics is named as Pañca-sūtra liṅga. One should be very careful about the size and shape of the liṅga because liṅga having Śiva and Śakti i.e. liṅga and its base, of the same size is the bestower of both the enjoyment and the liberation. Iṣṭaliṅga, awarded by Guru, is stated to be the best since it has been purified by the touch of Guru. Devotee should wear the Pañca-sūtra liṅga. Above all, the worship brimming with the emotion and intense love, is the only means to success.

In the fifth and the last chapter of Kriyāpāda, the rite of 'Sansthāpana' (installation), 'Sannidhānam' (keeping face to face), 'Sannirodhana', 'Avagunthana' and 'Sakalīkaraṇa' have duly been illustrated. 'Sansthāpana' (installation) means the invocation of Śiva in the liṅga. Contemplating Śiva, facing towards one's self is known as 'Sannidhānam'. Praying God to remain in front of the devotee, face to face till the worship is completed is said 'Sannirodhana'. Protecting one's own body by enchanting Śiva-kavaca is called 'Avagunthana'. Performing nyāsa on the point of heart etc. is known 'Sakalīkaraṇa'. Performing nyāsa concentrating on the different parts of the body, such as heart etc. and meditating Śiva on those parts is known as 'Amṛtikaraṇa'. Worship may be performed by invoking God in pot and image also. The devotee who aspires for both enjoyment and liberation, should contemplate on and worship the south face of God namely Aghora. Sadyojāta face is of the nature of Ācaraliṅga. Vāmadeva of Guruliṅga, Aghora of Śivaliṅga, Tatpuruṣa of Caraliṅga and Īśāṇa is of the nature of Prasādaliṅga. Mahāliṅga which is unique from all of them is only the Paramaśiva Himself. The devotee should offer all kinds of food viz. swallowable, devourable, gulpable and lickable to God and then accept them as offering which impart Dharma (spirituality) Artha (wealth), Kāma (enjoyment) and Mokṣa (liberation). Offering submitted to own Iṣṭaliṅga is stated to be immensely pure like the 'Caru' (offering) offered to the yajña (sacrifice). It has been affirmed that the devotee who regularly observe the Śāmbhavavrata with utmost sincerity and intense love and remains immersed in meditating on Śiva, surely attains the state of 'Sāyujya'.

The first chapter of the Caryāpāda begins with the enunciation of the last rite named as the famous 'Śivamedha' which is meant for the observer of the Śāmbhavavrata. The body of the Śāmbhava devotee, the wearer of liṅga whatever he might be, a celibate, householder or a retired person from the active life, should never be cremated after the demise. For him the ritual of samādhi, the most apt means that bestows the ultimate end of life and ceases the cycle of birth and death, should be performed.

The second chapter of Caryāpāda deals with the duties and rites of the devotee who leaves the body through the process of 'Utkramaṇ'. The devotee should take bath in accordance with the procedure of 'Āgneya' etc. wear Rudrākṣas on the different parts of the body, besmear the sacred ashes, install fire in his own soul by reciting the hymn "yā te Agne" etc. and then get ready to pass away peacefully by observing the process of Tattva-Saṁyojana which is a very significant rite for attaining the freedom and getting rid of the bondage of transmigration. The Tattva-saṁyojana signifies that the immersion of the different organs of the body in their respective original elements or divinities, has got an immense spiritual value in life. God advises the devotee to unite the hand along with its skill to the god Indra, ego along with all its elements to the Rudra, Citta to Brahmā and the ego, intellect etc. to their respective causal sources. The devotee should contemplate on the Liṅga existing in the various parts of the body, viz. Prāṇaliṅga in the self, Mahāliṅga in the heart, Prasādaliṅga in the ear, Caraliṅga in the skin, Śivaliṅga in the eyes, Guruliṅga in the tongue, Ācāraliṅga in the nose. Likewise the liṅgas are to be conceived to reside in the motor organs also. Sacred water washing the feet of guru, liṅga and jaṅgama annihilates all the sins and bestows the exalted status to the person irrespective of the sin committed by him. Only the recitation of the name of Śiva eradicates the cause of transmigration and enables the soul to attain the eternal excellence. Such is the glory of the recitation of the name and contemplation of Śiva.

In the third chapter, the duties and rites that should be performed by the authorised person, specially son, after confirming the death of his father, have duly been enunciated by the God. Son, after taking bath, besmearing the sacred ashes and wearing the Rudrākṣa with restrained and pure mind, should donate alms to the gaṇas and wellwishers of his father as per capacity. If there is any defilement like 'Urdhocchiṣṭā', death on the cot and at night, during the period of dark fortnight or when the sun remains in southern hemisphere (Dakṣiṇāyan), atonement of Prājāpatyavrata and the donation of cow or gold should be observed to condone the defilement caused by the above reasons. The rite of bathing the body of the deceased enchanting the hymns of Rudrādhyāy and worshipping the Iṣṭaliṅga with the sacred ashes, keeping it on the palm of the left hand, should be performed for the welfare of the deceased. Then the body is to be carried on to the place of Samādhi by the special carriers named Mahokṣa, Vṛṣabha, Nandīśa and Nandikeśvara along with the Iṣṭaliṅga enchanting the upaniṣads and the sacred hymns.

Now, in the fourth chapter of the Caryāpāda, the procedure of the ritual of samādhi has been illustrated, in details. The samādhi of the devotee of Śiva should be either near the Śiva temple, beneath the Bilva-tree or on the bank of a river. The procedure of digging the Samādhi has duly been described. The body of the deceased should be placed in a sitting position facing towards the north amidst various musical sounds, showering of flowers and enchanting of the hymns. The body should be dedicated to the God requesting Him to accept it. Then the samādhi is to be filled up with the sacred ashes, salts and earth, reciting the hymns meant for it. After fulfilling the rite of samādhi, the son should get the beard, mustache shaved and take 'sacail' bath, as the defilement produced by any bad action remains attached with the hairs.

Fifth chapter proceeds on elucidating the other rites, such as, installation of liṅga on the samādhi, along with the image of bulls, for the performance of worship with the milk and other items enchanting the particular hymns assigned for. Then the conceptual body is formed gradually one by one on completion of the twelfth-day rites. After the observance of Ekoddiṣṭa and the Tattva-saṅyojana, the deceased attains the status of Maheśa. If the son is not initiated at the time of the expiry of his father, then he should entrust the authority of the last rite to someone else. If the deceased is not initiated, then after making a body of the Kuśā, the act of initiation should be fulfilled in order to get the deceased to the state of liṅgī. The son, after observing the twelfth day rite, should besmear the sacred ashes, draw Tripundrak, and wear Rudrākṣa and perform Tarpaṇa. The liṅga, kept on the samādhi, is to be immersed in the water of the pilgrimage and then the sacrifice named Gānapatya and Ānanda should be performed. All the above mentioned sacraments and rituals are performed in order to obtain the pleasure along with the ancestors.

In sixth chapter, the rites to be fulfilled on the eleventh day (Ekādaśāh) have duly been explained in detail. The rite of Vṛṣotsarga should be performed on the eleventh day for all śāmbhava devotees except the person who happens to be observing the Nirābhārī āśrama. Sixteen kinds of worships commencing from half monthly are prescribed for the ancestors. Eleventh day, twelfth day, monthly, fortnightly, three fortnightly, six monthly and yearly alongwith the Tattva-saṅyojana and Edoddiṣṭa should be accomplished by the son. Eleven Māheśvaras are to be invited and fed with the delicious foods upto their satisfaction. Fifty Rudras that are related to Ṣaṭasthalas are also to be adored on the eleventh day.

The rite of 'Dvādaśāh' i.e. the twelfth day rite has been narrated in the seventh chapter. After the observance of Tattva-saṅyojana on the twelfth day, the deceased leaving his secluded fourth stage, unites himself with the ancestors. The devotee who remains attached with Śivaliṅga obtained from Guru at the time of dīkṣā, attains non-duality with Śiva by the unflinching meditation of God as the insect is transformed into a bee. As Śivahood is fully manifested in and through the dīkṣā, the sapīṇḍa rite on twelfth day for the devotee who although have worn the liṅga, is not necessary, because the śāmbhava devotee is not affected with the spirithood. The son should perform the rite of Tattva-saṅyojana for the cessation of creaturehood. By adopting the procedure of Tattva-saṅyojana and invoking the Kalas, Viśvadevas, Nandikeśa and Mahākāla and donating ten alms, the son conjoins his father with ancestors who have attained the nature of Maheśa and thus enables the father to achieve the status of Śivasāyujya.

In the eighth chapter, the procedure of Prakīrṇaka has been described as a response to the inquiry by god Rudra. He advocates that the eldest son has a unique and special position in the last rite. The rites of Udakadāna and Tattva-saṅyojana must be performed by the eldest son, even if already performed by his youngest or other brothers. If the Tattva-saṅyojana is performed at the time of last rite, then Pārvanārādhana need not be observed, only Aṣṭakā is enough. Son should perform 'Pārvaṇaśrāddha' every month and year for his father who has already attained the state of Maheśa through the rite of Tattva-saṅyojana. Two kinds of last rites for the ancestors who have attained the sphere of ancestors and the sphere of Śiva, have duly been prescribed. Oblation to fire, tyāga, piṇḍa, viśvadeva, sesamum, kuśā, the sect of ancestors, the container for oblation (arghapātra), rakṣā-sūtra (the protective thread), apasavya and vikir are the main accessories for the last rite of the ancestors, where as viśvadeva, place of ancestors, tyāga and rakṣā-sūtra are the accessories to be utilised for the worship of the ancestors indwelling in Śivaloka. Sapīṇḍa śrāddha is strictly prohibited for the observer of Śāmbhavavrata. This worship is said to be of three kinds, namely with regard to householder, Nirābhārī and Śaṅkalpika. Devoted worship of liṅga three times a day knowing the mystery of Ṣaṭasthalas and possessing deep regard for the Māheśvaras is known to be the supreme worship.

The ninth chapter deals with the procedure of Pratyābdik (annual last rites). After performing the regular duties, brahmin, gaṇas and Māheśvaras should respectively be adored with deep regard and the required accessories, such as, lamp, incenses, sacred ashes, betel leaves and money etc.

It is to be noted here that apasavya, sesamum, darbh, piṇḍadāna, havan, vikir and Arghapātra are prohibited for the last rite of Śaivas. One should pray for grace by offering flower, rice and turmeric etc. to the Viśvadevas viz. Nandi, Mahākāla and Maheśvaras etc. Then the procedure of drawing maṇḍalas and worshipping the Māheśvaras with various items viz. the sacred ashes, rice, incenses, flowers, bilva, along with the sandal wood, lamp and offerings should be observed. The performer should enchant the proper hymn, observe prāṇāyām and offer rice to the vistaro uttering 'svāhā' and 'svadhā' in the name of divinities and ancestors respectively. Viśvadevas and ancestors are to be invoked and adored with the incenses and flowers etc. and donated clothes, gold as per capacity. Then the procedures and hymns of worshipping the Māheśvaras, the embodiment of Isāna, have fully been illustrated in order to unite the deceased father with Śiva.

In the last chapter of Caryāpāda, God unveils the sacred truth that the person who is unattached with the empirical world and always remains immersed in the devotion of God by observing Śāmbhavavrata, is never affected by the impurities like other beings. Attachment with the worldly affairs is the main cause for the contact of the impurity. Despite the state of impurity, God advocates, worshipping Iṣṭaliṅga bestowed by guru at the time of initiation (dīkṣā) is capable of eradicating all impediments. Then various kinds of impurities regarding the different persons and their situations have been described along with the prescribed processes and procedures for their removal. Lastly, it is asserted that Sandhyā (regular worship) and the worship of Iṣṭaliṅga should never be abandoned even on the occurrence of impurity caused by the birth and death. Worship of Iṣṭaliṅga, at that condition, should be performed by the process of upāṇśu. Thus, for the purpose of showering grace, the glory of the Śāmbhavavrata and the rites to be performed by the Śāmbhava-devotee have been narrated by God Himself.

Now it is my pleasant duty to remember and acknowledge the blessings and help of my wellwishers rendered to me in fulfilling the mission of studying the scriptures. First of all I bow unto the feet of His Holiness Shri 1008 Jagadguru Dr. Chandrashekhar Shivacharya Mahaswamiji, the 86th Pontiff of the Kāśī Viśvārādhyā Jñānasimhāsana, Jangamawadimath, Varanasi and most humbly pray for his blessings. I gratefully acknowledge the help and suggestions provided by Pt. Vrajavallabha Dwivediji, Director, Shaiva Bharati Shodha Pratisthanam, Jangamawadimath, Varanasi and extend my most sincere regard to the eminent scholar. My heartiest thanks are due to Dr. G. C. Kendadamath of the Central library B.H.U., Varanasi, whose sincere help in reading the proof and rendering valuable suggestions have made the book in the present form. I feel happy to extend my affectionate thanks to Shri Chidananda O. Hiremath (Kasgi) and Shri Rajashekhar G. Hiremath for their sincere effort in composing the book within a short period of time. Lastly I gratefully remember the help and inspirations imparted by my wellwishers and friends that have enabled me in rendering a little service to promote the cause of Śaivism. Learned scholars may find many mistakes for which I beg to be excused and humbly seek their suggestions for further rectification.

I pray Lord Vishveshvar of Kashi to pardon me for the errors and omissions which may have occurred in rendering this sacred scripture into English. Namaḥ Śivāya.

God Rudra, the ardent devotee, humbly bowed unto and enquired to Parama Śiva who is the indweller of the mount Kailāśa, the annihilator of time, the ocean of compassion, the ground of the immeasurable glory, the supreme God, the infinite substratum of the universe, the ultimate cause of all causes, devoid of beginning, middle and the end, non-differentiated, unperturbed and adorned with His own innumerable, mysterious, unthinkable powers (1-3).

God Rudra Enquires —

O the first among the gods, the ocean of mercy, who is adept in performing the fivefold actions (creation, sustenance, destruction, obscuration and grace)! You are the controller of everything, omniscient and the essence of all beings (4). So, for the benefit of all beings, you have revealed spontaneously like the inhalation and exhalation the various sāṃhitās of Āgama and Nigama which are the base of the words as well as their meanings (5). Makūṭāgama, the crown of the expressions from your exalted mouth, has been manifested by you. O God! now I pray to listen the later portion of this Āgama (6). You have advocated the supreme knowledge of 'dharma', the bestower of liberation to the observer of Śāmbhavavrata in the later portion of this Makuṭāgama<sup>1</sup>. Kindly enlighten me (7).

Paraśiva replies —

O Rudra! I shall illustrate to you the mystery of Makuṭottara Āgama and also the glory of 'Śāmbhavavrata' along with the way of life of its observer. Please listen (8).

The special kind of worship, means of collecting the various items of worship and the kinds of the rituals of the last rites have also been described here (9).

The person who desires to cross the ocean of the births and deaths which is full of crocodiles of the various sufferings, should observe the 'Śāmbhavavrata', preached in the later portion of Veda and Āgama (10). The person who has dried up the ocean of the world in order to

O Rudra! If a person can attain immortality after drinking the poison, then he can attain liberation without observing the 'Śirovrata' (meaning thereby, as the attainment of immortality is impossible if one drinks the poison, so also liberation is unattainable without performing the 'Śirovrata') (15). One who is not blessed, does not worship Me and is not keen for liberation. Such non-blessed person can not obtain this supreme 'Śāmbhavavrata' (16).

One who is the knower of all scriptures, always remains absorbed in observing the principle of action, but does not fulfil the rite of 'Śāmbhavavrata' is considered nothing but an animal (17). One who raises any doubt regarding the eminence of 'Śāmbhavavrata', laid down here, is sure to undergo all kinds of sufferings. There is no doubt in it (18).

of Makutāgama describing the glory of 'Śāmbhavavrata'.*

Notes and References

1. The place of Makutāgama is 17th in 28 Śiddhānta Śaivāgamas starting from Kāmika to Vātula. References are found in Tantrāloka and its commentary Viveka. See Luptāgama saṁgraha. Present scripture is the later portion of Makutāgama. Siddhānta Śikhāmaṇi advocates that the doctrines of Vīra Śaivism have been asserted in the later portion of Siddhāntāgama (v.14). It also calls this āgama as 'Makutottara' (v. 8).
2. See Anubhava Sūtra, v. 52-53.
3. Śivavrata is named here as 'Śirovrata' since it is the supreme among all rites.
4. Karma-sāmya signifies the state of equilibrium between good and bad (sin and virtue) action and which prepares the field for and occasions the onset of divine grace.
5. Compare the verse with that of Śvetāśvatara upaniṣad (vi. 20) — "यदा चर्मवदाकाशं वेष्टयिष्यन्ति मानवाः। तदा शिवमविज्ञाय दुःखस्यान्तो भविष्यति॥"

God Rudra enquires —

O the Lord of lords! the beamed ocean of virtues, the inner self of all beings, please enlighten me about the regular procedure of 'Āhnik' performed by the devotees of Śiva who are the wearer of Iṣṭaliṅga and accomplished with Śāmbhavavrata (1).

Paraśiva replies —

I am describing the supreme penance of Śāmbhava and the regular procedure of 'Āhnik' that terminates the bonds of the world. Please listen attentively (2).

Devotee should get up in the 'brāhma muhurt' (early dawn) and bow unto the Māheśvaras (jaṅgamas) after having touched the Iṣṭaliṅga with the eyes keeping it on the palm of the hand and thinking of 'dharma' and 'artha' (3). One who beholds in the morning the devotee of Śiva who is the wearer of liṅga and a regular observer of 'vratas' and sacrifices, obtains the desired results (4). On the other hand if one beholds in the morning a person who is deceitful, fallen, cruel, undevoted, abuser of gods, procures the undesired results (5).

Learned person should go far from his house and ease himself by urinating and voiding excrement after having kept the sacred thread and pañcaliṅga thread towards the back through the throat<sup>1</sup> and covering the head (6). Then hands and legs should be washed with water till the mind feels purified because unpurified person is sure to be degraded (7). He should wash his mouth after washing hands and feet. Then devotee, the observer of śāmbhavavrata should observe 'ācamana' after having dedicated three oblations in the name of ātma, vidyā and Śivatattva<sup>2</sup> by uttering 'ātma tattvāya svāhā', 'vidyā tattvāya svāhā', 'Śiva tattvāya svāhā' (8).

Then he should clean the teeth with sticks of mango tree. After washing mouth and hands he should observe 'ācamana' and take the morning bath by invoking Śiva pilgrims (9). Performing 'Aghamarṣaṇa' and 'Tarpaṇa' in the name of devas are being considered to be the five parts of the bath (10). Bathing in unflowing stagnant water of spacious well, small well, pond etc., worshipping the feet of liṅgī brāhmin, reciting the Gāyatrī hymn and offering the oblation (arghya) are to be performed facing the sun; Tarpaṇa in the name of gods, saints and ancestors should also be performed (11). Then clean cloth should be worn after drying it in the sun; anointing the whole body with the sacred ashes is to be performed after observing the rites of 'Ācamana' and 'Saṅkalpa' (12).

Sacred ash prepared in the 'Śivāgni'<sup>4</sup> or by the procedure of 'Kalpa', is to be besmeared through out the whole body, by the process of 'Uddhūlan'; 'Tripuṇḍrak' in the thirty two places of the body is to be observed (13). Head, fore head, two ears, two eyes, two nostrils, face, throat and two shoulders are to be besmeared with sacred ashes (14). Wrists, elbows, heart, two chests, navel, two anus, two thighs, two

One Rudrākṣa in the crest<sup>5</sup>, thirty on the head, thirty six on the neck and sixteen on each of the arms are to be worn (17). Twelve Rudrākṣas on the wrists and five hundred on the shoulders are to be worn. A garland of 108 Rudrākṣa beads should be made for the purpose of 'japa-yajña' (constant recitation of the sacred hymn). Garland of Rudrākṣa is to be worn always during sleeping, eating and waking state (18). Wearing of one thousand Rudrākṣas is considered to be of supreme value, five hundred of medium and three hundred of meagre value. One should accept any of the three as per his desire (19). Rudrākṣa is to be worn on the head reciting Īśāna hymn; on the face

Rudrākṣa garland of three, five and seven layers should be worn with 'Pañcabrahma' hymn such as Īśāna and six-aṅga<sup>8</sup> hymn or all the Rudrākṣas and garlands may also be worn only reciting the original hymn (Pañcākṣara, the five syllable hymn i.e. 'namah śivāya' (22).

One should offer oblation three times to the sun residing in his own body. Thereafter my goddess Sāvitṛī (Gāyatrī hymn) is to be recited with deep concentration. (23).

Fire is my frightful nature. It should also be adored with restrained mind; Suvarṇā (golden), Kanakā (gold), Raktā (red,) Kṛṣṇā (black), Suprabhā (effulgent) and Atiraktā (deep red) — these seven are the names of the tongue of fire (24). The position of Suvarṇā tongue is in the west, Kanakā in the middle, Raktā in north and the place of Kṛṣṇā is towards the southern direction (25). Suprabhā resides in the east,

Atiraktā is in south east (āgneya) direction and Bahurūpā resides in the north east (Īśāna) direction — these are the seven places of the tongue of the fire (26). The oblations are to be offered to the Suvarṇā tongue at the time of marriage, to the Kanakā tongue which is situated in the middle, on the occasion of yajña (sacrifice); to the Raktā tongue during the time of sacred thread ceremony; to the Kṛṣṇā tongue of south on the occasion of last rites for the ancestors (27). Oblation should be offered to the Suprabhā tongue of eastern side for the fulfilment of desired action (kāmya karma), to the Atiraktā tongue of south-east (āgneya) corner to obtain peace and the oblation to the north-east (īśāna) tongue of fire namely 'Bahurūpā' for the purpose of fulfilment of strong actions, are always considered to be an accomplishment (28). Śivāgni should be meditated upon as the five faced red coloured having seven tongues, ten hands and three eyes, decorated with all kinds of ornaments; possessing ten personal weapons (āyudha) wearing the red clothes and seated in a lotus posture on a lotus flower (29-30). Out of the seven tongues namely Kanakā, Bahurūpā, Atiraktā, Suprabhā, Kṛṣṇā, Raktā, and Hiraṇmayī, first three are situated in the upper face (īśāna) and the rest four reside in the four faces of God Rudra (namely Tatpuruṣa<sup>9</sup>, Devotee should pay obeisance to fire after completing the fire ritual as per the procedures laid down and take refuge of the Guru and Jaṅgama (ardent devotee). Please listen carefully (33). After holding the box containing Liṅga, firmly, one should keep the left hand beneath the toe of Guru and get it in touch of (his own) eyes thrice (meaning thereby the disciple should get in touch his left eye with the left toe and the right eye with the right toe of Guru) and take refuge (34).

Aforesaid rites should be completed by one eighth part of the day. Then the second part of the day is to be spent in studying Āgama and Nigama<sup>10</sup>, performing japa and discussing the scriptures (35). During the third part of the day, one should collect the articles for worshipping, such as, fire wood, kuśā and flowers etc. and earn the means of livelihood for the dependants (36). Bath of the evening should be completed by collecting the earth and conceiving in it the pilgrimage of Śiva (37).

Then Tripundrak should be drawn after taking bath by the sacred ashes. Householder should perform the five great sacrifices (Mahāyajña)<sup>11</sup> daily after having performed the regular rites of worship during day and evening<sup>12</sup> as prescribed (38). After worshipping the devas and ṛṣis as per the rules laid down in the scriptures, one should offer the sacramental water<sup>13</sup> to the divine and non-divine ancestors by applying prescribed procedures. Then the worship of the day is to be completed after having performed the process of 'Vaiśvadeva'<sup>14</sup> (39).

Three kinds of worships namely Mahatī, Gurvī, and Laghvī are to be observed attentively. One should worship Me either six times<sup>15</sup> (as per the instruction of the scriptures) or three times during the regular performance of ritual-worship (40). 'Avasarā' worship is to be performed without taking meal and 'Anavasarā' should be observed after taking the food. Devotee should perform supreme worship (Mahāpūjā) on the 'ṣaṭasthalas' (six centres in the body) in accordance with the procedures laid down (41). One should devoutly perform worship with the overwhelming emotion and religious sentiments, facing the north, preparing the bed of sacred ashes and keeping the Iṣṭaliṅga on the left hand which has duly been purified with the sacred hymns (42). He should welcome the guest, whoever he might be — learned or illiterate — thinking him as my image (43). One should always meditate on Me at the time of taking food and praise Me by words. Such persons are never considered to be impure, since I always remain pure (44). Thus, Māheśvara devotee should take his food as my offering and wash the hands and face, observe 'ācamana' twice and touch the eyes (45). Then allow the food to be digested by reciting various praisings of God and earn the livelihood till the evening (46).

During dusk, after having been purified on taking 'Āgneya' bath one should devoutly observe two kinds<sup>16</sup> of regular evening worship facing the west and perform the sacrificial rituals (47). After performing the evening 'avasarā' worship, sacrifice to Vaiśvadeva is to be fulfilled. Then one should perform the midnight worship and adore the guests (48).

Thereafter one should take the rest on comfortable bed, meditate on Me with pure mind and go to sleep abandoning all the anxieties of the world (49). O Rudra! I have narrated to you the regular rites of the Śaiva devotees. Worshipper attains the feet of Śiva by observing these regular rites. One who does not observe the same, suffers the miseries of the hell for unending time (50).

Here ends the second chapter of the Kriyāpāda of Makuṭāgama stating the procedures of regular worship.

Notes and References

1. It is to be noted here that the sacred thread may be put towards back but it is not applicable for Liṅga-Sūtra. Iṣṭaliṅga is to be tied up with Liṅga-Sūtra and the rest of the sacred thread should be left to back side. According to Siddhānta Śikhāmaṇi, Iṣṭaliṅga should never be worn below the navel vi. 53. Sacred thread should be tied up with the ears at the time of nature's call.
2. The concept of ātma, vidyā and śiva-tattva have been defined in Saubhāgya Śuddhodaya as — "मायान्तमात्मतत्त्वं विद्यातत्त्वं सदाशिवान्तं स्यात्। शक्तिशिवौ शिवतत्त्वम्" (1.89) see also Netratantra (Mr̥tyunjay Bhaṭṭārak).

3. Water should be filled up in the right hand, it should be covered with left hand and the water should be poured in around the person from the right reciting the three hymn “ऋतं च सत्यं च” etc. This rite is named as ‘Aghamarṣaṇa’.
4. See the first Vidyeśvar Saṁhitā (18.62-69) of Śivapurāṇa for the concept of ‘Śivāgni’.
5. See Siddhānta Śikhāmaṇi “शिखायामेकमेकास्यम्” (7.54-58).
6. In Śaivāgamas “व्योमव्यापिन् व्यापिन्” etc. verses have been mentioned.
7. “ईशानः सर्वविद्यानाम्, तत्पुरुषाय विद्महे, अघोरभ्योऽथ घोरेभ्यः, सद्योजातं प्रपद्यामि, वामदेवाय नमः” — These five verses, of Śaivāgamas, are famous as Pañcabrahma (Taitt. Āraṇyak 10.43-47).
8. हृदयाय नमः, शिरसे स्वाहा, शिखायै वषट्, कवचाय हूँ, नेत्रत्रयाय वौषट् and अस्त्राय फट् — these six are called the aṅga mantras.
9. It is stated in the viveka commentary of Tantrāloka refering the Srikanthi Saṁhita that Gāruda tantra has been emanated from the Tatpuruṣa face, Bhairavāgamas from the south face namely Aghora, Bhūtatantras from the west face namely Sadyojāta, Vāmatantras from the north face namely Vāmadeva, and Siddhāntāgamas from the upper face namely Īśāna.
10. Here the word ‘Nigama’ refers to vaidik scriptures and the word ‘āgama’ indicates Śaivāgamas.
11. It seems that here the five sacrifices of Manusmṛti have been indicated. The Pañcayajña of Viraśaivas is different from that of Manusmṛti which is described as ‘Śivayajña’ in Siddhānta Śikhāmaṇi.
12. There are two procedures of sandhyā advocated by the Vedas and Tantras. Both kinds have been prescribed for the followers of Śaivāgamas.
13. “अङ्गुल्यग्रे तीर्थं दैवं स्वल्पाङ्गुल्योर्मूले कायम्। मध्येऽङ्गुष्ठोङ्गुल्योः पितृन् मूले त्वङ्गुष्ठस्य ब्राह्मम्॥” (2.6.50) This verse of Amarkośa points out that the tip of the fingers is meant for devas, the root of the little finger signifies the ‘kāya-tīrtha’, the place in between the thumb and fore finger is called ‘pitṛ tīrtha’, where as in the root of thumb ‘brāhma-tīrtha’ is known to exist. Tarpaṇ of different deities are performed with the respective portion i.e. of deities by devatīrtha, of sages by ‘kāya-tīrtha’ and of ancestors by ‘pitṛ-tīrtha’. Brāhma-tīrtha is used for ‘ācamana’.
14. Viśvadevas are being sacrificed by the rite ‘Viśvadeva’.
15. In the Kriyāpāda of Candrajñānāgama (11.64) the whole day is divided into six parts i.e. dawn, sunrise, morning, noon, after noon and midnight.
16. See note no.11.

Rudra enquires —

O the eternal supreme teacher, the abode of all unknowable qualities, the substratum of the world! kindly enlighten me regarding the specific procedures of worship (1).

Paraśiva replies —

O Rudra! I am describing unto you the superior kind of worship. Please listen. Worship is said to be of three kinds namely Mahatī, Gurvī and Laghvī (2).

The person of first order should observe Mahatī worship and the person who belongs to the middle order should observe Gurvī worship and the person who is unable to perform the above should observe Laghvī worship. These are to be performed during evening and noon time (3). Worship in the morning, noon and evening without taking food, should regularly be performed. Wise person should observe worship either for six<sup>1</sup> or three times (4).

Padmamandal<sup>2</sup> for Avasarā worship, Navapadma maṇḍal for Laghvī worship, Bhadra maṇḍal for Gurvī worship and Tattva maṇḍal for Mahatī worship are to be drawn (5).

Three lamps should be kindled in Avasarā worship; nine or twelve in Laghvī worship and thirty six or eighteen lamps are to be lit in Gurvī worship (6). Further there is the tradition of enlightening hundred and eight, three hundred or one thousand lamps in Gurvī and Mahatī worships (7).

Only one light is to be kindled in Laghvī or Avasarā worship. Thus, four or two lamps are to be lighted in Mahatī and Gurvī worships (8).

During the Laghvī and Avasarā worships, the original five letter hymn should be recited for hundred and eight times. So also the original hymn is to be recited one thousand times in Gurvī and Mahatī worships (9).

O learned one! three kinds of 'Ārati' namely Darśana, Avasarā and Uttarā have been prescribed in Avasarā worship (10). Nine processes of Nīrājan (Ārati) have been laid down in Laghvī worship. Those are named as Darśanākhyā, Avasarākhyā, Majjanākhyā, Māṅgalyākhyā, Karpūr, Śringār, Mahānīrājan, Ānandākhyā and Asaṅkhyāta (11-12).

Eleven kinds of 'Nīrājan' have been prescribed in Mahatī and Gurvī worships. By adding Sānurāga and betel leaves, the total number of Nīrājan comes to eleven (13). One should not perform the process of 'Sañkalpa' (submitting the purpose of worship unto God) without lighting the light. Raṅgavallī and light are to be adored with incenses (14).

In Avasarā worship there should be a small offering named as 'Avasarā'. O the wise one! a big offering should be offered on the occasion of Laghvī worship (15). The offering that is capable of

Makuṭāgama describing the specific procedures of worship.*

O Śaṅkar, the abode of unthinkable glory, ocean of mercy! kindly tell me about the various ingredients used in worship (1).

Paraśiva replies —

A mixture of honey, cow-milk, curd, ghee, sugar in equal proportion with the pure water is considered to be appropriate for the sacred bath (abhiṣeka) of the deity (2). cardamom, khus, clove, musk, and kumkum (vermilion colour powder) — these five ingredients are to be added with the above sacred bathing water or as an alternative process; camphor, musk and kumkum or cardamom and khus may also be mixed up with the sacred water for the purpose of sacred bathing of the deity (3).

The smell of the mixed ointment of rocana, kumkum, cardamom, camphor, kūta, black agara, musk (kastūrī), sandle and inner stuff of leaf is said to be the best among all leaves. Thus blue Lotus and Karavīr are special and Droṇa, Āragvadh have the highest position among all flowers (25).

The devotee who performs worship with hundred and eight or fifty golden leaves or flowers becomes eligible for endless good results (26). Leaves and flowers made of gold are not defiled after worship. So the devotee should regularly worship Me with them (27). Such golden leaves and flowers are never considered to be stale and hence that may be used by collecting them again (i.e. by washing them with the water) (28).

Now listen carefully the procedure of preparing the 'dhūp' (incense powder) which I am narrating to you. The mixture of Camphor, Agar, Takkol, Nutmeg (Jātiphal), Clove, Jatāmānsī, Rhus Succedenia (Sinhī), Cyperus Rotundus (Mustak), Sandle and ghee — these ten ingredients is known as the 'Daśāṅga dhūp' (a mixture of incense powder having ten ingredients) of pleasant smell (29-30), a mixture of Sandle, Agar, Camphor, Kastūrī, Kumkum, Takkol Elā, Nāg flower, Clove and Cinnamon is named as 'Yakṣakardam dhūp' which is very dear to Me. Please note (31). The dhūp made of Sandle, Agar, Camphor, Clove, Cinnamon, Rhus succedenia, Cardamom, Jatāmānsī is famous as 'Prājāpatya' (32). A mixed dhūp prepared by the ingredients of Sandle, Agar, Camphor, Musk, Tilak, Clove, Hasitā and Cyperus Rotundus (Mustā) is the conferrer of victory (33). Camphor, black Agar, Hyber, vermilion colour powder (Kumkum), Sausurialapa (Koṣṭha) and Sandle are to be mixed up gradually increasing the quantity and honey is to be added in the proportion of one, two, three, four, five and six times. Such mixture is named as 'Śītāri' dhūp. Please remember that this also is very pleasant to Me (34-35). Sandle, Agar, Camphor, Rhus succedenia and Sarjaras are to be added with the powder of sausrilapa (Koṣṭha) and Cyperus Rotundus (Mustā)

 Then the whole thing is to be added with the 'Vijayākhyā' dhūp. This famous 'Karpūr kalyān' dhūp is known to be the means of liberation (36). The dhūp prepared by the powder of Sandle, Agar, Musk, Cyperus Rotundus (Mustā), Rhus succedenia (Sinhak) is named as 'Amṛta' which is the bestower of immortality (37). The mixture of the powder of Takkol, Pūg, Camphor, Nutmeg and clove is named as 'Sugandha' dhūp which is known as the bestower of both enjoyment and liberation (38). 'Guggul' dhūp alone destroys the sin of seven births. Thus the dhūp of Sandle also is capable of eradicating all the sins and 'Saugandhik' dhūp is considered to be the means to achieve the 'Kāma' (enjoyment) and 'Artha' (wealth) (39). The dhūp prepared by white Agar is only the conferrer of liberation. The dhūp of Guggul mixed with ghee is the provider of immense enjoyment (40). Dhūp prepared by mixing the Mahiṣākṣa with the powder of Tamāl is pleasing to me and is the bestower of the status of 'Sāyujya' to the devotee. (41).

Now I am narrating the procedure of enkindling the lamp. Please listen to it attentively. O Antakasūdāna (conquerer of death)! for the worship of Śiva, the ghee prepared from the cow milk is considered to be of best kind, from buffalo milk of medium quality and the oil from the sesamum seeds is known to be of the lowest kind (42). O son! the oil of Margosa, Castor seed, Carissa carands which produce bad smell should never be put in the lamp used in my worship (43). Any auspicious work should never be initiated without enkindling the lamp. Thus, any rite related to gods and ancestors becomes fruitless if performed without enlightening the lamp (44).

O son! now I am telling you the characteristic features of Liṅga. Please listen to it carefully. The Liṅga made of crystal<sup>1</sup> etc. associated with Power, is to be adored. One should worship the Liṅga characterised with 'Pañcasūtra' for the accomplishment of his desires (45). The length, breadth and the vertical height of the base of Liṅga (Pīṭha) should be equal to the circumference of the Liṅga and Gomukh (upper outlet) should be half of the size of the circumference of the Liṅga. Liṅga, possessing these five characteristics is named as Pañcasūtra Liṅga (46). The worshipper expires if Liṅga is larger<sup>2</sup>; loss of wealth occurs if Śakti (base of Liṅga) is larger. Liṅga having Śiva and Śakti (i.e. Liṅga and its base) of the same size is the bestower of both enjoyment and liberation (47). The size of the Liṅga should never be less than half finger<sup>3</sup> and more than one full finger. Worshipper should always wear the Liṅga of the size of 'Pañcasūtra' (48). The Iṣṭaliṅga awarded by Guru is considered to be the best and is endowed with all attributes. No verification regarding the characteristics of the Liṅga should be made since it has been purified by the touch of Guru (49). Devotee should assume the abundance of the best possible flowers, fruits and other items in his mind (50). The worship brimming with devotion is known to be successful. I have narrated all the procedures of worship to you. Now, what more do you want to listen? (51).

Here ends the fourth chapter of Kriyāpāda of Makuṭāgama describing the procedures of preparing various articles for the worship.

Notes and References

1. “स्फटिकं शैलजं वापि” (6.22) – Siddhānta Śikhāmaṇi. One of the Liṅga made of crystal, stone, moon-stone and sun-stone may be accepted for worship. The base (11.32) of the Liṅga is called ‘Śakti’.
2. See the verse “लिङ्गाधिक्ये” (Bhā. 3, p 41) of Kriyāsār.
3. Size of the finger is equal to the size of eight Barleys.

Rudradeva enquires —

O Lord! you are omnipresent. How to invoke you? How may the rite of 'Saṁsthāpana' (installation) and 'Sannidhānam' (keeping face to face) be performed? In which of your mouths the oblation should be offered? Kindly explain to me (1). Things offered to you are said to be eatable by some and unacceptable to others. Kindly explain to me as for whom it is acceptable and for whom it is not? (2).

Paraśiva replies —

O learned Rudradeva! Invocation from one place to the other is not possible as I remain all pervasive, but revelation in and through the specific Liṅga and desired image at a particular place occurs as per the conception of the devotee. You can conceive it as invocation (3-4).

Installation is known as my invocation in the Liṅga which exists in the lotus heart of Sadāśiva and in the image (5).

Contemplating Śiva facing towards one's self is named as 'sannidhānam'. Praying God to remain face to face in front of the devotee, till the worship is completed, is said 'sannirodhan' (6). Protecting one's own body by chanting Śivakavaca (sacred hymns of God) is called 'avagunṭhana'. Performing nyāsa on the point of heart etc. is known as 'sakalīkaraṇa' (7).

Different letters of the original hymn are associated with the nyāsas of five points of the body viz. heart etc. Conceiving only my nature in those parts is called 'amṛtīkaraṇa' (8).

I always remain in front of the devotee in and through the 'Sthaṇḍil' and Caraliṅga'. I remain seated in the pot etc. towards west and I always exist in the fixed image facing towards the entrance (9).

The devotee who aspires for both enjoyment and liberation should take refuge in my south face (Aghora). Such person should worship me sitting in front of south face (10). Contemplating hands, heart, private part and feet along with my south face in front, devotee should reverently adore me (11). Various kinds of food, drinks etc. which are the objects to be eaten, licked, sucked, have been prescribed in the scriptures as the offerings to Śiva, should only be offered to my upper mouth (12).

Surrendering offerings to the five faces of Śiva has got its unique glory. Sadyojāta face is of the nature of Ācāraliṅga, Vāmadeva of Guruliṅga, Aghora of Śivaliṅga, Tatpuruṣa of Caraliṅga and Īśāna is of the nature of Prasādaliṅga. Mahāliṅga which is unique from all of them and is only Me alone (13-14).

So, devotee should carefully accept the food regularly after submitting it to these six liṅgas (15).

The offerings and the food accepted by me are of four kinds i.e. swallowable, devourable, gulpable and lickable which impart dharma (spirituality), artha (wealth), kāma (enjoyment) and mokṣa (liberation) respectively (16).

The 'nirmālya' denotes, that which is undefiled, pure and can never be abused. Such, all pure offerings (nirmālya) are not eatable by impure and unauspicious persons (17). If the impure person, instead of controlling his temptation of being pure, eats pure offering, will go downward like that of a brāhmin having drunk the wine (18). If a greedy person and one devoid of Śaiva culture accepts the offerings (nirmālya) is sure to suffer the 'Raurava' hell (extremely painful hell for the heinous criminals) (19). So the 'ācāryā' who has worn Śivaliṅga', remains absorbed in Me and has taken my refuge, are eligible to accept My offering, no one else (20).

The offering (food) of Caṇḍa is considered to be very abhorrent and can never be offered to any body else. But Caṇḍa does not claim to have any right on the offerings of vāṇaliṅga, Caraliṅga, liṅga made of iron and gems, self-emanated liṅga and other images (21)

Offerings submitted to own Iṣṭaliṅga is considered to be immensely pure like the 'Caru' (offering) offered to the yajña (sacrifice). There is no doubt in it. Devotee should never eat, even in emergency, leaves, flowers, fruits, water, cereals, drinks, medicines etc. without offering Me (22).

The devotee for whom my regular worship is supreme, always accepts the food offered to me in the worship, ever remains intensely immersed in meditating on me, surely attains the state of 'Sāyujya' (23)

God Rudra, out of compassion and for the welfare of the world, approaches and most humbly bows unto Paramaśiva, the greatest of gods, the Lord of lords, the resident of great Kailāśa, the supreme among all the merciful beings residing on the mount Kailāśa, endowed with twenty five faces<sup>1</sup> and fifty hands, of the nature of Pañcabrahma hymn, immutable but ever engrossed in performing five-fold actions and enquires (1-3).

Rudra enquires —

O the infinite substratum of the world, self sustained, transcendental, the substance of all elements, the God of the gods! I bow unto you (4). You have very clearly stated the procedure and nature of Śāmbhavavrata in the later portion of divine Āgama and Nigama which is the immediate bestower of liberation (5). Please tell me the ritualistic procedures of the last rites of devoted worshippers, the wearers of Iṣṭaliṅga, the dvija who always remains absorbed in performing this sacred rite (Śāmbhavavrata) (6).

Paraśiva replies —

O son! you have asked an apt question in view of the emancipation of the devotees. I am elucidating the best possible procedure of the last rites for the devotee. Please listen carefully (7). The person who is initiated and endowed with the procedure, attains liberation early. Oriented with this rites one is able to achieve the success of 'Śāmbhava' initiation easily. Even non-devoted person also reaches the ultimate goal (8). For the devoted observer of 'Śāmbhavavrata' and wearer of Iṣṭaliṅga on the body, the procedure of 'Śivamedha'<sup>2</sup> has been enunciated in the scripture to attain my feet (9).

For those who have entered into the closest unison with Me (sāmarasya), adoration itself is said as 'medha' (Śivamedha). Aspirant must observe 'Śivamedha'. The specific kind of 'Pitrmedha' is known as 'Śivamedha' (10).

Scriptural utterances like 'Sarvasya pratiśiva' (Śiva is ever present) and 'bhūmistoyasya' (earth is the substratum of wordly things) indicate the procedure of the samādhi for the devoted worshipper (11). It is supposed that the person observing only 'Śivamedha' attains my feet notwithstanding being devoid of devotion and knowledge (12). If a person is doubtful about the attainment of liberation, even after maintaining devotion in Me, performing worship, possessing my knowledge and observing 'Śāmbhavavrata', is sure to suffer the hell (13). The non-believer and unwise person can never be relieved from the hell if he does not keep faith in the prescribed ritualistic last rites for the observer of 'Śāmbhavavrata' (14). The attendants of 'Yama' burn the unwise person in the hell who inflames the body of the observer of 'Śāmbhavavrata' on pyre (15). Superior procedures of 'samādhi' in the last rite for my devotees who aspires for liberation, has been illustrated in the 'Pitrmedha' (16).

I have described the funeral to be performed with the fire for those who keep themselves attached in the worldly affairs and consequently remain within the cycle of transmigration (17). O son! for the devotee who always wears Iṣṭaliṅga and does not come within the cycle of birth and death, the highest procedure of last rite namely 'samādhi' has been advocated by Me (18). The body of the person who has observed 'Śāmbhavavrata', should never be cremated in fire after his demise whatever he might be, celibate, householder, retired from the active life or sage (19).

The devoted observer of 'Śāmbhavavrata' does not get the spirithood. So, the question of redemption from the spirithood does not arise (20).

For the devotee who always remains immersed in the contemplation of Liṅga, 'apasavya' (transferring the sacred thread from left to right shoulder while performing the last rites) is not necessary. So, no ritual to remove the spirithood of the devotee who keeps himself ever engrossed in observing śāmbhava practice, is performed (21).

'Samādhi' is the supreme procedure for the attainment of liberation. It is considered to be exceptionable for the other rites and rituals. So, once endowed with 'Samādhi', there is no question of lapse regarding the religious practices (22). 'Samādhi' is the most apt means that imparts proximity of Mine. The popular custom of the world to cremate the body in fire, is only the means of achieving the sphere of the ancestors (Pitrloka) (23). The only last rite of my devotee has been narrated by Me is 'Samādhi'. Those who do not maintain faith in the means narrated by Me, are surely unable to come out of the sea of hell (24).

 praising the last rites to be performed for the 'Śāmbhava-devotee'.*

Notes and References

1. Indian scriptures have been divided by the Śaiva philosophers as Loukik (empirical) Vaidik (scriptural), Ādhyātmik (spiritual), Atimārga (transcendental) and Mantra (hymn). Each is again divided into five and thus twenty five in total number. Here it seems that twenty five faces are being imagined for the preaching of the twenty five kinds of the scriptures.

2. The famous Pitrmedha rite of vedic scriptures is named here as 'Śiva-medha'. See Śukla Yajurveda, Mādhyandin saṁhitā, ch. 35. "Dharma shastra kā itihāsa" P.V. Kane (Part III, pp. 1114-1122).

God Rudra enquires —

O the supreme God, the soul of the universe, the cause of all, the eternal! what is the immediate duty for the person who is ready to leave the body through the procedure of 'utkramaṇa'? Kindly enlighten me (1).

Paraśiva replies —

If the devotee of Mine is about to expire, then he should be bathed as per the procedures of 'Āgneya' etc. for the fulfilment of the alms etc. (2). He should draw the 'Tripuṇḍra' after observing the process of 'Uddhūlana'<sup>1</sup> with sacred ashes, wearing the washed clothes and sitting on the ground on the seat of Kuśā. Then he should wear Rudrākṣa on the head, neck and hands etc. as per the rules laid down (3). If any body, whatever species he might belong, expires, besmearing the sacred ashes and wearing Rudrākṣa, is sure to attain the status of Rudra, what to speak of human being (4). Knowing the symptoms of

If death (samutkrānti) occurs without premonition, then his son should observe the procedures as per rule, by installing fire within himself (6). To quench the fire enkindled within self, he, after having purified the six adhvas, should perform sacrifice (yajña) in the water (7). After appeasing fire within and performing sacrifice in the water, he should donate gold, cow and Liṅga as per the capacity (8). At the critical time of demise (son utters) ‘I donate the cow namely ‘utkrānti’ with the view to peaceful passing away of the soul (9). For the attainment of eternal union with Śiva (wherefrom there is no return), I offer this holy Śivaliṅga to you’ (10). Dakṣiṇā (last gift for the purpose

O god! the result of the offering of crores of universes is equal to the result of donating Śivaliṅga alone (12). Devotee should regularly and attentively conceive the existence of Liṅgas (Ācāraliṅga, Guruliṅga etc.) in different parts of the body till alive with the purpose of attaining the state of 'Śiva-sāyujya' (enjoying the closest union with Śiva) (13). He should gradually consign the gross body to their respective causes by observing the procedure of 'Tattva-saṅyojana' and reciting the hymn 'āyusaḥ prāṇam'<sup>4</sup> etc. (14). The apertures of the body in space (ākāśa), the stream of inhalation and exhalation in the air (vāyu), heat of the body in the fire (agni) and the blood, pus and phlegm are to be immersed in the water (ap) (15). The hard parts viz. the bones and the muscles etc. are to be consigned to the earth. Likewise, the subtle body should also be infused after submerging the gross one (16).

O the bearer of Triden! please listen to the procedure of immersion of the subtle body. Knowing the importance of the gods of the concerned sense organs that provide inspiration to them, one should attribute the senses and their objects to the respective gods (17). O Śarva! one should consign the sense organ of mouth along with the speech to fire, hands with all skills to Indra, feet along with movement to Viṣṇu, sex organ along with the sexual activity to Prajāpati, and anus along with excreta to death (yama) (18); ear along with the sound to the gods and direction, skin along with touch to the air, eyes along with form to the sun (19); tongue along with the taste to Varuṇa, nose along with the smell to Aśvinī Kumāras, mind along with the thinking process to moon, intellect along with the knowing process to the four faced (Brahmā) and ego along with all the ego based activities to Rudra (20). All attitudes of enjoyment and its observations are to be submitted to 'Kṣetrajña'. Thus citta along with all its objects of consciousness is to be surrendered to their respective like natured divinities, lastly evolving citta should also be united with Me as Brahmā (21). Evolutes like Earth (Prthvī), five gross elements (Mahābhūtas), Ego (Ahaṅkāras), Intellect (Mahat) and Prakṛti (Avyakta) etc. should be assumed as being merged gradually in their respective causes (22).

One should contemplate the association of the various parts of the body with Liṅga as long as the life (soul) remains in the body, for the attainment of My 'sāyujya' (the most intense relation) (23). Realization of the manifestation of all pervasive Liṅga in all parts of the body, occurs only on account of the knowledge imparted by Guru (24). The only eternal, transcendental Liṅga that exists in the body, is revealed in the form of name, form and action etc. (25).

Iṣṭaliṅga is established in outer, Prāṇaliṅga in the self (26). Mahāliṅga is existing in the heart, Prasād liṅga in the ear, Caraliṅga in the skin and Śivaliṅga in the eyes (27). Thus Guruliṅga resides in the.

tongue, Ācāraliṅga is at rest in the nose (28). Existence of Liṅga in the motor organs should also be conceived respectively as that of sensory organs i.e. Prasādaliṅga in the vāk or mouth, Caraliṅga in the hands, Śivaliṅga in feet, Guruliṅga in anus and Ācāraliṅga in genital organ are to be conceived (29). Śiva is trans-rational, indeterminate, beyond the consciousness and speech, omnipotent, omniscient and of the nature of existence-consciousness and bliss (30).

The devotee who conceives such Paraliṅga and attains the purity of consciousness should observe the atonement (for the sins have been committed) with the permission of gaṇas (ardent devotees of Śiva) (31) The acceptance of the sacred water washing the sacred feet of Guru, Liṅga and Jaṅgama immediately annihilate even the heinous sins committed in the numerous previous births. There should not be any doubt in it (32). For the observer of Śaiva discipline, specially for my devotee, no atonement is superior to the acceptance of the sacred water from my feet (33). At the time of expiry, if the sacred water of my feet is given to the person — even non-virtuous — is sure to achieve the exalted status. He also should recite my name attentively (34). The person who recites the name of ‘Śiva’ thrice before leaving the body, for him only the utterance of the first word annihilates the fear of the world and the rest two utterances cause the upliftment of the soul (35). Thereafter, the son of the devotee should recite the hymns to his ears. The sadaḥkṣarī and the upaniṣad, the bestower of the eternal excellence should be enchanted to the right ear (36). Then camphor should be enkindled during the time of expiry (utkrānti) reciting the hymn ‘aṇuh panthāh’<sup>5</sup>, so that the devotee may be able to achieve the elevated status like ‘arci’ etc. (37).

O the trans—empirical, the cause of the world, the substratum of all, the transcendental! What duty should be performed by the authorised person after understanding the time of demise (utkrānti)? Please tell Me (1).

Paraśiva replies —

After confirming the death, the authorised person, with pure mind, should take bath, wear Rudrākṣa and draw Tripundrak (2).

He should seek permission for the accomplishment of the last rite after bowing to the gaṇas and donating as per capacity (3). The alms offered at the time of last rite is considered to be special from other religious occasions. So, one should donate as per his capacity to the wellwisher of his father (4).

If there is any defilement like 'ūrdhvocchiṣṭa'<sup>1</sup>, then adequate atonement is to be performed. For this purpose, items representing the 'Prājāpatya-vrata' should be offered (5). If the death occurs on the cot, Prājāpatya-vrata<sup>2</sup> is to be performed. Cow or gold should be donated to condone the above defilement (6). If the death occurs during the night, dark fortnight and also when the sun is in southern hemisphere (Dakṣiṇāyan), last rites are to be performed with the oblation uttering the six hymns like 'tāh sūryāh' etc. (7).

After the expiry, the rite of bathing for the deceased, should be performed enchanting the Rudrādhyāy of the scripture and worship of Iṣṭaliṅga should be performed with the sacred ashes, Rudrākṣa and incenses etc. (8). Then the Iṣṭaliṅga should be adored putting it on the hand and then should keep It in the box (container of the Liṅga). The body along with the Iṣṭaliṅga should be carried on the carrier (vimāna) to the place of samādhi with the auspicious sounds (9).

The bearers of the vimāna are named as Mahokṣa, Vṛṣabha, Nandīśa, and Nandikeśvara. They are appointed to carry the vimāna (10).

The son should go to the place of samādhi with the adored carriers of the deceased. All the players of the auspicious sounds should go first, then the items meant for the rituals and worship, after that performer of the rites, lastly the 'vimāna' followed by the friends should proceed on (11). The carriers of the 'vimāna' should be 'nivīti'<sup>3</sup> (they should put their sacred thread tied up with Iṣṭaliṅga in the neck instead of on the shoulder). All the kins should proceed on, enchanting the upaniṣad (12).

Here ends the third chapter of the Caryāpāda of Makutāgama describing the gradual position of the procession leading to the place of samādhi.

Notes and References

1. The significance of the word 'ūrdhvocchiṣṭa' is not clear here. It seems that if there is any Pañcak or Tripuṣkar yoga during the time of the death, then the rite for appeasing the evil effect has been advised to be performed.

2. Prājāpatya is a kind of atonement. See Manusmṛti (11.211); P. V. Kane : 'Dharmaśāstra kā itihāsa (Part 3, pp. 1090-1091).
3. “उपवीतं यज्ञसूत्रं प्रोद्धते दक्षिणे करे। प्राचीनावीतमन्यस्मिन् निवीतं कण्ठलम्बितम् ॥” In this verse of Amarkośa (2.7.49) three positions of the sacred thread has been described. The sacred thread hanging on the right side is called as 'upavīta' (savya), on the left side 'prācīnāvīta' (apasavya) and on the neck 'nivīta'. Present verse refers to the third position.

Paraśiva replies —

The samādhi of a wise person is to be located either near the temple of Śiva, in the garden adjacent to it, near the pilgrimage of Śiva, beneath the bilva tree or on the bank of a river. I am describing their characteristics (2).

The shape of samādhi should be square; length and breadth should be equal to five steps (walking steps) and depth of nine walking steps. First stair will be of one step, second of two steps and third of three steps (3). A triangular hole of the size of three walking steps should be dug within and towards the south corner of the samādhi. A small dias or platform of the size of the three walking steps both in length and breadth should be made within that triangular hole (4). Then the samādhi should be anointed with the cow-dung reciting the hymn “mā vo riṣat”<sup>1</sup> and decorated with the ‘raṅgavallī’ (traditional artistic paintings using the ingredients like the powder of the rice and colours etc.) and sprinkle the water reciting the hymn of Gāyatrī (15). Flowers should be showered everywhere of the samādhi after preparing the bed of the sacred ashes as per the rule laid on enchanting the hymn ‘agnih’<sup>2</sup> etc. (6).

The place should be sanctified uttering the original five syllable hymn (pañcākṣara) along with the six syllable hymn. In the midst of various musical sounds of tūrya etc. and showering the flowers reciting the hymn ‘cittih, pṛthivyagnih’, the body of the deceased devotee should be placed in a sitting position of ‘svastikāsan’ facing towards the north and pray to God, ‘O Śambhu, kindly accept it as your offering’ (7-8).

The samādhi be filled upto the neck of the deceased with sacred ashes, salts and earth reciting the hymn 'ṛtam tapah'<sup>3</sup> (9). The sacred ashes mixed with water and earthen ball should be kept on the head of the father (by the son) reciting the hymns 'sarvasya prati Śiva' and 'mūrdhānamdivah'<sup>4</sup>; then the pit should completely be filled up with the sacred ashes and the earth (10).

Samādhi is to be covered with the clothes and bath should be taken. Then he (son) should get his hairs, beard and mustache shaved after observing 'sacail' bath (11). The various sins like the killing of brahmin and stealing of gold etc. remain attached to the hairs. So, I am stating the procedure of 'keśavapan' (12). The heinous crimes comparing with the height of Sumeru and Mandārācal (mountains) reside making the hairs as their base. So, one should clean the hair and beard reciting the above two hymns (13).

The crest (crown of the head) of the Śaiva devotee is of the nature of knowledge, powerful as the flame of the fire. Such devotee is known as the real 'Śikhī' — the bearer of the crest. Others only bear the hairs in the form of crest (14).

Makuṭāgama illustrating the procedure of preparing the 'Samādhi'.*

Rudra enquires —

O Parama Śiva, the beginningless, the ocean of infinite auspicious qualities! kindly enlighten me by describing the rites to be performed after the observance of the procedure of 'bhūnikṣepa' (1).

Paraśiva replies —

Son, with the view to achieving the divine state of his father, should fulfil the rituals of shaving, bathing, besmearing the sacred ashes, wearing the garland of Rudrākṣa and take the permission of gaṇas to install the liṅga on the samādhi, duly scribed on it the name of the father and decorated with five or nine bulls (2-3). Then he should respectfully donate ten items, such as cow etc. and worship the liṅga along with the bull kept on the samādhi (4). To quench the heat produced because of putting the earth on it during the rite of samādhi, he should satiate the Iṣṭaliṅga by bathing it with the milk (5). He should offer the handful of water three times for the welfare of his father and should never offer water squeezing the clothes (6).

Son should enter the house accompanying the kins keeping the lamp with him and then perform the worship named 'Nagna-pracchādana' (7).

The liṅga kept on the samādhi should not be removed for ten days. If it is per chance removed from the place by any animal etc. then after putting it on the proper place, prāṇāyām for three times and 'vyāhṛtījapa' '(aum bhūh, aum bhuvah, aum svah)' touching the liṅga should be observed. If the liṅga is destroyed, it should be installed again as per rules laid down (8-9).

After the performance of rites on the first day, the head of the deceased person is formed. Thus nose, ears and eyes are assembled after the performance of rites of second day (10). Neck, chest and hands are shaped on the third day and on the fourth day genital organ, anus are brought about along with the navel (11). Thais are produced on the fifth and skins on the sixth day. Thus, all the nerves are fashioned on the seventh day (12). Further, on the eighth day, the hairs of the body come into being and after the ninth days' ritual, semen are produced in the body (of the deceased) (13). He (deceased) gets full satisfaction after the completion of the rituals of the tenth day. Thus, the father with divine form is to be adored after fulfilling the last rites consecutively for ten days (14). Then he (father) attains the status of Rudra after the observance of 'ekoddiṣṭa' for him and obtains the state of 'Maheśa' on the completion of the procedure of 'Tattva-saṅyojana' (15).

On the first, third, fifth, seventh, ninth and eleventh day, the son should fulfil the worship of 'navārādhana' (16). If the new moon day or the saṅkrānti day falls within these ten days, then others may complete the rite (ārādhana) on that day, not the son (i.e. other person except son are allowed to conclude the last rites on the new moon day or the 'Saṅkrānti' day if that falls within ten days but the son should observe rite of 'ārādhana' for the full ten days) (17).

If the son is not initiated (dīkṣā) at the time of the death of his father, then he (son) should entrust the authority of the last rites to some one else (18). If the father is not initiated, then the aforesaid rites are not to be performed. In that case, a body of the Kuśā is to be made and the rite of dīkṣā should be performed. Thereafter all other rituals of samādhi and regular duties should duly be observed (19). If the father of the father (grand father) and his father (great grand father) expire without having been initiated, then the rite of indirect initiation should be performed in order to unite him with the ancestors (20). Keeping the 'kūrca' (body made of kuśā) on the alter, the deceased is to be invoked by name and thus after performing the indirect initiation, he is sure to become a 'liṅgī' (the bearer of liṅga) (21).

Relatives, kins and the youngers (than the deceased) should get shaved before the seventh and on the tenth day respectively along with the person authorised to perform the last rite (22). The rite of 'Tarpan'

The liṅga installed on the samādhi is to be wrapped in a cloth along with the bull and to be taken to the pilgrimage and immersed in the water with restrained mind (24).

After immersing the liṅga in the water, he should take bath with the water mixed with sesamum and Phyllanthus Emblica etc. and then perform sacrifice named Gāṇapatya and Ānanda etc. (25). All the aforesaid sacraments are to be fulfilled in order to get the pleasure along with the ancestors. Then he should proceed for home after reciting the auspicious words (26).

Here ends the fifth chapter of the Caryāpāda of Makutāgama elucidating the procedures for the installation of the liṅga.

Notes and References

1. The donation of cow, land, sesamum, gold, ghee, clothes, cereals, jaggery, silver and salt is considered to be the ten-alms.

2. The rite of 'Nagna-pracchādana' should be observed after entering into the room. In this rite one full pot filled up with cereals, one pot of ghee and one pot filled up with the pieces of gold, silver and other coins as per the capability, should be donated. The pot containing the cereals is to be covered and tied up with the cloth. These two pots are to be donated to a poor brahmin belonging to a higher family heritage in the name of Viṣṇu. #### Rudra enquires —

O Paraśiva, the substratum of indeterminate qualities, the only ocean of consciousness and bliss, the abode of compassion! Kindly enlighten me regarding the rites to be performed on the eleventh day (of the death) (1).

Paraśiva replies —

On the eleventh day, son should take bath, invite Māheśvaras (Jaṅgam) and fulfil the rite of 'vṛṣotsarga' after observing the procedure of Rudra-sacrifice (2). A bull of white, red or black colour is to be donated, so that the proximity with Me may be attained by appeasing Nandikeśa. The rite of 'vṛṣotsarga'<sup>1</sup> is not to be performed for the devotee residing in the 'Nirābhārī Āśrama' (3). Sixteen kinds of worships, commencing from half monthly, are prescribed for the ancestors. Along with them, worship of Rudra and 'vṛṣotsarga' (offer of bull) are also included (4).

Along with the worship of six liṅgas and six sthalas, such as ācāra etc.<sup>2</sup>, prime adoration of fifty Rudras are also performed (5). First worship is performed on the eleventh day, ūnmāsik is to be done before the completion of one month, 'traipākṣik' after three fortnight and 'ūnṣāṇmāsik' on the completion of six months, each month on the day of death and lastly on the completion of one year. Thus sixteen ritual-worships are to be performed during the whole year (6). On the eleventh day, all the sixteen rites are to be observed and on the twelfth day, the rite of 'Tattva-saṅyojana' should be fulfilled by the son (7). The rite of 'Tattva-saṅyojana' when accomplished for only one person, is named as 'ekoddiṣṭa' as per the rule laid down in the procedure of 'ekoddiṣṭa' (8).

The worship of Viśvadeva, in the above rite, is not performed, nor the 'abhiśravaṇa'<sup>3</sup> is observed. Pradakṣiṇā, visarga or Simāntagamana are also not done (9). On the eleventh day, eleven Māheśvaras should

Fifty Rudras, namely Khadgeśa etc. which are related to Ṣaṭliṅga viz. ācāra etc. and ṣaṭasthalas are worshipped (12). Fifty Rudras are related to liṅgas i.e. four to ācāraliṅga, six to guruliṅga, ten to śivaliṅga, twelve to jaṅgamaliṅga, sixteen to prāṇaliṅga and two to Mahāliṅga. ### Notes and References

1. Donating the bull in the name of ancestors has got immense value. See 'Dharmśāstra kā itihāsa, Vol.3, pp. 1291-92.
2. See the verse 12-13.

3. The recitation of the vedic hymns by the brahmins at the time of taking the food on the occasion of śrāddha is named as 'Abhiśravaka'.
4. See Prapañcasāra (3/39-44) for the names of the fifty Rudras starting from Śrikanṭha to Saṁvartaka. There are similarities despite of some differences. In the contemplation of the sixfold lingas and the six sthalas in the six centres (ṣaṭcakra), the Rudras are being imagined as the representative of the meditative colours.

Rudra enquires —

O the all powerful, the illustrious embodiment of all the divine qualities, the all embracing immanent! Kindly explain to me the full procedures of 'dvādaśā' rituals (the twelfth days rites) (1).

Paraśiva replies —

The creaturehood is eliminated along with the fourth state<sup>1</sup> by the performance of 'Tattva-saṅyojana'. The rite of 'Tattva-saṅyojana' is performed for the elimination of the fourth state. By the observance of the rite, the creaturehood also comes to an end along with the fourth state (meaning thereby after the performance of Tattva-saṅyojana on the twelfth day by the son, the deceased leaving his secluded fourth stage conjoins with his ancestors) (2). The devotee who remains attached with the Śiva-līṅga (Iṣṭalīṅga) obtained from Guru at the time of dīkṣā attains oneness with Śiva by the incessant contemplation as the insect is transformed into a bee (3) The rite of twelfth day is not done for the deceased who althrough bears līṅga on the body. The rite of 'sāpiṇḍya' is not to be done for him as he is not affected by the spirithood (the 'sāpiṇḍya' rite is performed for the elimination of spirithood, so the observance of this rite is not required for the liṅgī – the bearer of liṅga) (4). The knower of Āgama is fully aware of the fact that Śivahood is manifested in place of creaturehood at the time of initiation owing to the attainment of oneness with Śiva (5). By borrowing the 'kalās', the constituents (through the rite of Tattva-saṅyojana) from the fore fathers who have attained the state of non-duality with Sadāśiva etc., worship should duly be performed by imposing those 'kalās' to the deceased (6).

The son should perform the procedure of 'Tattva-saṅyojana' for the wearer of the liṅga for the cessation of his creaturehood and unite him with the three generations of ancestors (7). On the twelfth day, the authorised person should invite Māheśvaras and take vow after seeking permission from gaṇa (ardent devotee) (8). 'I am uniting my father with his forefathers who have attained the nature of Māheśvaras, by adopting the procedure of 'Tattva-saṅyojana' with the view to attaining the state of 'Śiva-sāyujya' (enjoyment of the nature of Śiva by being immersed in Śiva) (9). Invoking and worshipping Viśvadeva, ancestors, elements and kalās, he should perform the rite of 'Tattva-saṅyojana', fulfil the procedure of ten alms and donate cow respectively (12). The performer of rite should take the seat near the place meant for father and ancestors who are of the nature of Maheśa along with the copper plate filled with rice (13). The performer of the rite should take the shelter of the place of father, invoke ancestors and assume their touch on that container (14). He should unite his father with the controller of tattvas namely Candraśekhara etc. reciting the hymn 'Sadyojātam prapadyāmi'<sup>3</sup> etc. (15).

Kalās namely Śaśinī etc. should also be attached gradually uttering the hymn 'īśānaḥ sarvavidyānām'<sup>4</sup> (16).

The copper-container should be handed over to Māheśvara seated in a place for father. Then the container should again be handed over to another Māheśvara assuming him as grandfather and uttering 'I am uniting my father with grandfather' (17). 'I am attaching the grand father who is of the nature of Māheśvara to great grand father' — uttering this he should dedicate that copper container to the Māheśvara assuming him as great grandfather (18). Thereafter uttering, 'I am uniting the great grandfather who is of the nature of Sadāśiva, to great great grandfather'; he should surrender that copper container to the Māheśvara seated at that place (19). 'I am uniting the great great grand father who is as pure as Śiva to formless Paramaśiva' — uttering it he should contemplate his immersion into that formless Śiva-tattva. Thus the fourth state of the departed soul comes to an end by the observance of the procedure of Tattva-saṅyojana' (20-21).

Here ends the seventh chapter of Caryāpāda of Makuṭāgama illustrating the procedure of the rite to be performed on twelfth day.

Notes and References

If the son arrives from outside within ten days of his father's last rite being performed by his brothers<sup>1</sup>, he should first perform all other rites except samādhi and join his brothers for the rest (2).

Eldest son should perform the 'udakadāna' and 'Tattva-saṅyojana' rites himself for his father even if already performed by his youngest or other brothers. Once fulfilled by the eldest, younger need not perform it again (3).

If the wife of the performer is menstruated after the completion of the period of impurity (for the death) is over, she should perform the other rites except the rite of 'Tattva-saṅyojana' (4). If the wife of the deceased gets menstruated during the performance of the rite of 'Tattva-saṅyojana', then she should fulfil the rite of 'Tattva-saṅyojana' after being pure on the fifth day (5).

Rite of 'Tattva-saṅyojana' is not performed for the eunuchs, corrupt women, boys under twelve years and celibate (6). The sacrifice named Īśāna has been prescribed for 'naiṣṭik brahmacārī' and sage (yati). If the rite of 'Tattva-saṅyojana' has not been performed, then the yearly rites are also not to be observed (7).

The whole procedure of last rite is to be fulfilled with the 'Pārvaṇaśrāddha'. The rite of 'udaka kumbh' etc. should be performed with vow within the period of one year (8). Son should not perform for the whole year or six months the rite of 'Pārvaṇārādhana' except the rite of 'aṣṭakā' provided the 'Tattva-saṅyojana' is performed at the time of last rite (i.e. if 'Tattva-saṅyojana' is performed during the last rite, then 'Pārvaṇārādhana'<sup>3</sup> need not be done, only 'aṣṭakā'<sup>2</sup> is enough) (9). Son should perform the rite of 'Pārvaṇaśrāddha' every month and year for his father who has attained the nature of Maheśa through the rite of Tattva-saṅyojana (10). If the son does not accept the remaining portion of the food prepared during the worship of divinities and ancestors, then all the rites, even if performed properly, become futile (11). The last rite is allowed to be performed respectfully in the night, in the event of emergency, naktavrata and eclipse during day time (12). Wise person should satiate the ancestors by performing 'tarpan' with pure water and rice during the time of eclipse, at the pilgrims of ancestors and on the day of moonless night and on the last day of the month (13).

On the occasion of the last rite of the ancestors who have attained the nature of Maheśa, the devotional worship of forefathers is named as 'ārādhana' (14). In this 'ārādhana' Nandi, and Mahākāla are named as Viśvadeva and father, grandfather and great grand father are respectively named as Maheśvara, Sadāśiva and Śiva. Śambhu is said to be the protector of all (15).

Śrāddha (last rite) is said to be of two kinds i.e. one is for the residents of the sphere of ancestors and the second one for the indwellers of the region of Śiva. O Rudra! now I shall gradually illustrate the various procedures of the śrāddha that provide pleasures to the inhabitants of the sphere of ancestors. Please listen. Oblation to fire (hom), tyāga, piṇḍa, Viśvadeva, sesamum, kuśā, the sect of ancestors, the container for oblation (arghapātra), rakṣā sūtra (the protective thread), apasavya and vikir are known as the various accessories and ingredients of the ceremony of the last rites for the ancestors. Now I am describing the ancestors who dwell in my sphere (Śivaloka) (16-18).

Sacrifice (hom), piṇḍa (offering in last rite), sesamum, darbha, vikir, container for oblation (arghapātra) and apasavya, these seven items are prohibited for the ancestors residing in Śivaloka (19). Viśvadeva, place of ancestors, tyāga and protective thread (rakṣā sūtra), these four are the accessories and ingredients of rite for them also. So, these items should be utilised (20).

The person who performs 'sapiṇḍa śrāddha' for the observer of śāmbhavavrata, is sure to fall in the hell along with the seven generations of ancestors (21).

This worship is said to be of three kinds, namely with regard to householder, nirābhārī and saṅkalpika (22). Viśvadeva, pitṛddeśa, tyāga and saṅrakṣaka are included in case of householders. For the nirābhārī, the rites of Viśvadeva, pitṛddeśa, tyāga, saṅrakṣaka sūtra are prohibited (23). Only conceptual worship is performed in case of 'kāruṇik'<sup>4</sup> and the rites of Viśvadeva, rakṣāsūtra, tyāga, and āvāhana are redundant (24).

The worship of the person who is well-versed in the knowledge of Śaiva scriptures, adept in the wisdom of ṣaṭasthala, worships Śiva three times during the whole day, faithfully devoted to Liṅga and Māheśvaras, is considered to be the main worship. The person who worships only once a day is said to be of medium category (25-26). The procedure of Prakīrṇaka.*

1. See Dharmasāstra kā itihāsa (Vol. 3, pp. 1149-1153).
2. The śrāddha performed on the day of aṣṭamī of the bright fortnight of the month of Mārgaśīrṣa is known as the 'aṣṭakā'. This rite is performed for Indra, Viśvadeva, Prajāpati and ancestors with the ingredients of 'apūp' and vegetables. See Dharmasāstra kā itihāsa (Vol. 3, p. 1207 ).
3. The śrāddha performed in the name of father, grand father and great grand father is known as 'Pārvaṇ'. This is the most important among all the śrāddhas. See Dharmasāstra kā itihāsa, (Vol. 3, pp. 1240-1277).
4. In the commentary of Brahmasūtra by Bhaskar, a Śaiva sect namely 'Karuṇāsiddhānti' has been mentioned along with the Siddhānta śaiva, Pāśupat, Kālāmukh and Kāpālīka. Here it seems that by the word 'kāruṇik', the jaṅgama of the above mentioned sect has been referred to.

O the Lord of the universe! you remain unperturbed amidst the self created multiplicity of the universe. Please enlighten me regarding the procedure of the Pratyābdik (annual last rites) (1).

Paraśiva replies —

After performing the regular duties, one should respectfully invite and bow down to the brāhmin enkindling the lamp and decorating with the incenses etc, (2). One should approach and bow unto gaṇas like Nandikeśvaras with sacred ashes, betel leaves and money as offering contained in a vessel (3). Then he should encircle the Māheśvaras with intense concentration reciting the hymn 'nama āvyādhinībhya'<sup>1</sup> and ringing the bell three times (4). Now having performed 'ācamana' and duly praising the space and time, vowing 'I shall fulfil the rite of 'aikyapādan' for the pleasure of my father', he should worship the pot (5). He should wash the ingredients of worship thinking that all the accessories that annihilate the sins are meant for the purpose of adoration of Māheśvaras (Jaṅgamas) and then gradually surrender them one by one (6).

Apasavya, sesamum, darbha, piṇḍadāna, havana, vikir and arghapātra are the seven items of śrāddha prohibited for the śaivas (who is initiated with the original hymn) (7).

In the last rite ceremony, father is said to be Māheśvara, grandfather is of the nature of Sadāśiva and great grandfather is the embodiment of Śiva. These three are the divinities to be worshipped in the last rite ceremony (8).

People, through the penance and wisdom attain lofty positions, but for the purpose of donation, feeding and worshipping, there should not be any discrimination (9).

By offering flower, rice and turmeric (kṣaṇa) to the place of Viśvadevas' viz. Nandi, Mahākāla etc. and ancestors like Maheśvaras etc. and also to the place of Śambhu – the protector, one should pray for grace (10-11). The invited Māheśvaras should observe silence with pleasant gesture contemplating on Me, lest they should fall downward (12).

Two kinds of maṇḍalas i.e. internal and external are to be drawn reciting the hymn 'araṅgam'<sup>2</sup> for the purpose of worshipping the feet (13). There should be a distance equal to six fingers in between these two maṇḍalas, so that the water used for the washing of the feet does not touch the place meant for the ancestors and divinities (14). Offerings on the feet of ancestors and divine beings are to be dedicated after drawing two maṇḍalas and worship also is to be performed on the same place with the sacred ashes, incenses and other ingredients (15).

Invited Māheśvaras should be offered respective seats with ovation and their feet should be washed reciting the hymn 'sanno devīḥ' (16). He should sprinkle the sacred water washing their feet on his own head and clean their feet with cloth; thereafter the feet of Māheśvaras should be worshipped with sacred ashes, rice, incense, flowers and bilva etc. along with sandalwood, lamp and offerings, reciting the hymns. Then the holy feet of Śiva, the protector, should also be washed respectively along with the Viśvadevas and ancestors and both the performer and enjoyer of the last rite should accept that water (17-18). The performer of the last rite should observe prāṇāyam and dedicate the rice kept in a vessel with hands to the vistaro<sup>4</sup> uttering 'svāhā' and 'svadhā' in the name of divinities and ancestors respectively (19).

He (performer) should please the Viśvadevas and ancestors invoking them by name and lineage, adore them with incenses, flowers etc. and donate clothes and gold as per his capacity (20).

Sacred ashes should be sprinkled on the food assuming it for the Māheśvaras. Then 'ārādhana' should be performed after meditating on the pilgrimage Gayā, God Maheśvara and ancestors viz. Maheśa etc. (21).

Reciting this hymn and for the eradication of the impurities of the food, 'abhidhānam'<sup>5</sup> is to be done enchanting the five hymn namely 'Pañcabrahma'<sup>6</sup> (22).

Then enough quantity of food should be served on the vessel. Thereafter Māheśvara should offer food to the Iṣṭaliṅga. Worshipper should purify the vessel uttering the hymn 'deva savitaḥ'<sup>7</sup>, then he should hold the thumb of Māheśvara<sup>9</sup> and put it into the offering reciting the hymn 'prthvī tepātram'<sup>8</sup> 'yacchaṇyo', 'tryambakam'<sup>10</sup> etc. (23-25).

During the fulfilment of rite of uniting the deceased with the ancestors, one should pray for their unending pleasure caused by the cessation of transmigration (29). Now the prayer should be held for the accomplishment of the eternal union with Śiva and the performer should assert thus — 'whatever is required to be dedicated has duly been fulfilled' (30).

Then water should be poured for 'ācamana' in the name of divinities and ancestors respectively. 'Let the eminent God Maheśvara, the embodiment of Īśāna who is the form of ancestors be pleased with 'Madhuvātā, Madhu' etc.<sup>12</sup> and request the Māheśvaras to eat food at ease, without any hurry. They (Māheśvaras) also should reciprocate the same (33). If Śiva is remembered during the recitation of hymns and performance of any rite, then billion times of results is produced (34). Māheśvaras should demand for expected food of their liking and reject the undesirables. They should eat food sitting with a peaceful healthy mind (35). During the time of accepting the offerings, they should enchant the hymns of upaniṣads and the hymn of Jābālā concerning the rite of 'śrāddha' (36).

After submitting the offerings (to the Māheśvaras), the hymn 'madhuvātā, madhu' etc. should be recited. The performer of the rite should enquire regarding their satisfaction and they (Māheśvaras)

'Let the ancestors bestow with joy the longevity, subjects, wealth, knowledge, heaven, liberation, various worldly pleasures and kingdom'. Uttering this one should see the Māheśvaras off upto the boundary of the premises (44). The difference between the worship of last rite and the worship of pilgrims is that of aim only, not in practice (45).

The lineage of mother and father are worshipped on the day of Mahālayā every year. This has been described in scriptures (46). Firstly father and mother are to be worshipped, then step mother, thereafter maternal grandfather with his wife, lastly one's own wives (47). Then comes the turn of the son, brother, uncle, maternal uncle, daughter, sister, son of the daughter and son of the sister are the next in order (48).

O Maheśvara! despite of all efforts, if the Māheśvaras are not available, then all the rites of worship of the feet of ancestors should be accomplished on the 'Viṣṭar' made up of kuśā and putting the bell and the ball of sacred ashes on it (50). The offering of food in the name of ancestors should be given to the cows and 'dakṣiṇā' (offering in terms of money) to the brāhmins. One can also secure the great result of worship by performing it in the above process (51).

One who observes the worship for the parents as per the procedures laid down here, acquires a long life, wealth and all happiness of the children and achieves respect in the sphere of Śiva (52).

One who does not perform the rites of worship of the ancestors on account of being atheist or lethargic, takes the birth of a crow for hundred times and lastly is born as a dog (53).

Here ends the ninth chapter of the Caryāpāda of Makuṭāgama describing the procedure of the last rite to be performed yearly.

Rudra enquires —

O Parama Śiva, the boundless basis of the universe and at the same time baseless ocean of mercy, the all pervasive! I have got some doubts regarding the eradication of the state of impurity (1). How the persons who are purified with the practice of Śāmbhavavrata are touched with impurity, as they leave their bodies observing the Śāmbhavavrata and in constant meditation? (2). They attain immortality. How the impurities be associated with the bodies of such persons? O the ocean of all wisdom! Kindly remove my doubts (3).

Paraśiva replies —

O son! you have asked an appropriate question for showering mercy on the honest devotees, though the answer of this question is quite secret, but I shall explain it to you. Please listen to it carefully (4).

The person who always remains pure by observing Śāmbhavavrata and keeps himself engrossed in my service, is capable of attaining liberation because such person is free from the possibility of contacting the impurity after death because he is not affected by the impurities like other beings (5). Still for such yogī who is associated with the world, impurities on account of birth and death is sure to occur. The sage who is unassociated with the world, remains unaffected with this impurity (6). Attachment with the world is the main cause for the contact of the impurity. If the performer of Śāmbhavavrata remains attached with the worldly affairs, then know it for certain that he will be affected by the impurities caused by the birth and death (7).

Despite the state of impurity, worshipping Me is not supposed to be obstructed, because the dīkṣā (initiation) bestowed by guru is capable of removing all impediments (i.e. nothing can create any obstruction in worshipping Śivaliṅga i.e. Iṣṭaliṅga) (8). But as for the 'nitya' and 'naimittika' and other karmas (regular actions and rites on special occasion), the initiated has to observe the same rules and regulations concerning the state of impurity as the non-initiated person (9). One who has infused fire in himself by performing the sacrifice of ‘som’, even the demise (utkrānti) of such person is sure to cause the state of impurity to the relations and friends (10).

Impurity is said to be of two kinds i.e. of birth and death which is again divided into four, such as short, long, complete and incomplete (11). The impurity that endures for short period is called ‘short’ and that prolongs for a longer period is named as ‘long’. Impurity for three nights is called ‘incomplete’ and the impurity that lasts for ten days is called ‘complete’ (12).

In case of abortion<sup>1</sup>, mother is affected for three days’ impurity, but the other relations are not supposed to be affected by the impurity. In case of abortion, the duration of impurity for the mother depends on the duration of the pregnancy, where as for father, it is only for three days (13). The duration of impurity is ten days for the brahmin, twelve days for the kṣatrīya, fifteen days for the vaiśyas and one month for the Śudras (14). If one is informed about the birth after ten days, then he is not affected by any impurity, but in case of receipt of information of the birth of his own son, (even after ten days) he should bathe in water in order to attain immediate purification (15). If the child expires just after the birth, then relatives get purified at once, but the parents and brothers attain purification after ten days (16).

If the child expires before teething, then also the relatives are purified at once. If the child expires before the ritual of hair-cut, then the impure state should be observed for only day and night (17). If the son expires before having the sacred thread ceremony, then the parents should observe impurity for three nights and if he dies after having the sacred thread ceremony, then full time impurity of ten days should be observed (18). Regarding the above, kins should observe the state of impurity for full ten days, near relatives three nights<sup>2</sup>, the person of the same lineage should only take bath for purification; for later generation and for others no purification is required (19).

On the expiry of maternal uncle etc. three nights' impurity and on the death of kins and friends two days' impurity should be observed (20). If the news of expiry is received after three months, then three nights' impurity is to be observed, two days' impurity on the information after six months and one day and night's impurity is to be observed if the information is received after one year. After that, purification is attained on bathing only (21).

If one is affected with various impurities (due to demise of many persons), then purification is attained at a time. The impurities of the same days or less days come to an end with the first impurity (22).

If the impurity caused by the birth and death coincides, then the impurity caused by the death is to be considered important. Thus the expiry of parents should be considered as the obstructive to the other impurities (23). If the death of mother occurs within ten days of the expiry of father, then after observing the full impurity and last rites for father, impurity for mother for two days more should be observed (24).

If one accompanies the funeral procession of any brahmin, relatives or friend, then he achieves purification after taking bath, besmearing the sacred ashes and having my 'darśana' (25).

Naiṣṭik<sup>3</sup> (one who performs prescribed rituals regularly), one who has retired from active life, ascetic and brahmacāri (avowed celibate) are not affected by the impurities caused by births and deaths (26).

In case of alms giving, marriage, sacrifice, war, revolution in the country, emergency and immense suffering, immediate purification is prescribed (27).

'Sandhyā' (regular adoration) and the worship of Iṣṭaliṅga should never be abandoned even on the occurrence of impurity caused by birth and death. During such time regular worship and the worship of Iṣṭaliṅga should be performed by 'trikaraṇa', the process of upāṅśu (with mind, speech and body i.e. during the impurity worships should be performed in such a way that the recitation of the hymn should not be within the hearing of the other people) (28).

Thus, I have narrated, in brief, the rites to be performed by the observers of the Śāmbhavavrata. One who keeps faith in it, attains freedom, where as non-believers suffer on account of attachment (29).

This religious scripture namely 'Makuṭa' is the gem of the crown of all the scriptures advocated by Me. One who seeks my grace, should study it carefully (30).

Here ends the tenth chapter of the Caryāpāda of the later portion of Makuṭāgama narrating the procedures for the purification of the impurity.

End of Makuṭāgama.

1. Abortion upto four months is called 'srāva'; on fifth and sixth months is called 'pāta' and on the seventh months and onwards is named as 'prasūti' (Dhrama., p. 1161).
2. In Dharamaśāstra, the last rites (śrāddha) performed for the ancestors are named as 'sapiṇḍa', 'sodaka' and 'sagotra'. Śrāddha performed for the seven generations upward is called 'sapiṇḍa', upto fourteen generations upward from seventh is called 'sodaka' and upto twentyone generations is named as 'sagotra' (Dharmaśāstra, pp. 1161-1162).
3. The defilement that occurs owing to the birth and death of the kins, is considered to be empirical. Strict celibate, person retired from the active family life and sages are exempted i.e. remain untouched with the defilement.
